What Kind of Hearing Aids Do Doctors Use?

The same ones they recommend to their patients!

Doctors love MDHearingAids® for the same reasons patients do. These FDA-registered, medical-grade hearing aids have the same high-tech features found in more expensive hearing aids yet cost one-fifth the price.

Advanced Hearing Aid Technology For Less Than $200

"MDHearingAids are better than expensive clinic hearing aids, which cost thousands more," says retired physician Dr. Robert A. "I have had five pairs of expensive hearing aids and MDHearingAids are just as good," adds retired neurosurgeon Dr. Brian L.

So Strong Even Doctors Can't Break Them
MDHearingAids are made to last, backed by a world-class support team. Says one forgetful neurologist:

"My MDHearingAids went through a complete washer and dryer cycle. I placed them on my ears and – ay caramba! – they were working fine! Can you believe that I did it again? I found them at the bottom of the washer... still working!"

Nearly invisible!

Big Sound.
Tiny Price.

CRISP, CLEAR SOUND

MDHearingAids were created by a board-certified otolaryngologist frustrated that patients couldn't afford the high price of hearing aids. So, he did the only logical thing...he created a low-cost, feature-packed hearing aid that costs one-fifth the price of a comparable hearing aid.

STATE-OF-THE-ART FEATURES

Automatic dual-directional microphones, adaptive noise suppression, speech enhancement technology, and dynamic range compression are just a few of the features that help you focus on the conversation, not the noise around you.

NO AUDIOLOGIST NEEDED

Save time and money, cancel those audiologist appointments! Advanced hearing aid technology lets you easily program and adjust your MDHearingAid at home. Set-up is fast and easy, too, going from box to ear in just five minutes.

Service to Country

I was touched by Circle of Life. My dad served in World War II on a destroyer in three theaters of the war—Atlantic, Pacific and Mediterranean. My two older brothers served in the Army, one in Korea and the other in peacetime Germany. My youngest brother was in the Air Force in peacetime. I had several uncles who also served in various branches during World War II. All served because they loved this country.

The Need for Charity

The November issue was waiting for me when I returned from my latest trip to Haiti, where I teach disaster-resistant home construction. One of the letters [On Matters of Aid] concerning a $35,000 donation to Bolivian rural electrification ended: “Charity begins at home.”

Yes, take care of your family, but charity should begin where there is a need. I have regularly worked with people in Haiti who eat one meal every two to three days, but I have never found that level of need in the U.S.

ANNIVERSARIES

HOPE YOU EAT THIS UP

Texas Co-op Power turns 75 in 2019, and we'll commemorate the past 75 years with a themed timeline every month in Currents.

Our goal is to highlight events and milestones in history that coincide with the publication of the magazine, which began in July 1944 as a four-page newspaper called Texas Cooperative Electric Power.

These timelines are by no means comprehensive—75 years of history can't be captured in just a few hundred words. We trust readers will let us know of overlooked moments and people.

We kick off with food and drink. Next month we'll feature sports. In the coming months, watch for these themes: politics, music, electricity and energy, science and technology, the economy, rural life, travel, outdoors, society and fashion, and the arts.

◀ LOOKING BACK AT FOOD AND DRINK THIS MONTH

THE INTRODUCTION OF ELECTRICITY into rural kitchens in the 1930s heralded a revolution in cooking and food that changed life in countless ways.

1940s

1944 The second issue of Texas Cooperative Electric Power publishes its first recipe—for Fruit-Stuffed Spareribs.

1947 David Pace starts bottling something he calls picante sauce in a rented room in the back of a San Antonio liquor store. Also, the electric dishwasher hits stores.

1949 Pillsbury holds its first bake-off.

1950s

1954 More than 25 million TV dinners are eaten in front of 33 million TV sets in American living rooms.

1958 Blue Bell Creameries, in business since 1907, ceases production of butter to focus solely on ice cream.

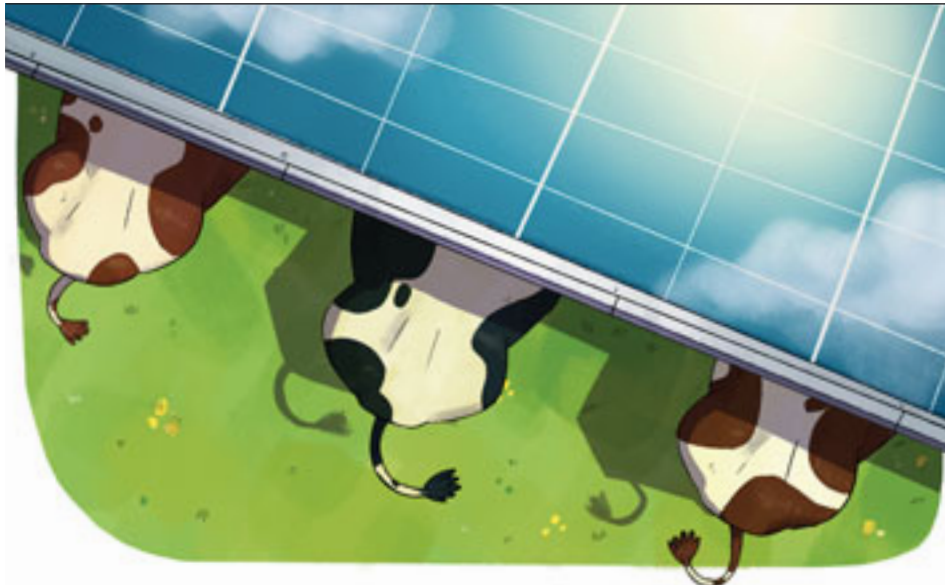

1960s

1960 A Woolworth's store in San Antonio serves lunch to four black people, positioning San Antonio as one of the first major Southern cities to desegregate lunch counters.

1964 The plastic milk container is introduced commercially.

1967 Amana introduces Radaranges, household microwave ovens. They sell for $495 ($3,800 in today's money).

Made in the Shade

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA researchers are experimenting with installing solar panels 8 feet off the ground to provide shade for livestock, according to Farm Journal. “We’ll monitor the behavior of the cows under the shade, their eating and lying behavior, and also their milk production compared to when they don’t have access to the shaded areas,” researcher Brad Heins said.

January 25 is not National Opposite Day. Don’t have fun with that.

1970s

1970 Typically Texas Cookbook, more than 300 pages of recipes submitted by electric co-op members, is published.

1971 The first frozen margarita is poured at Mariano’s Mexican Cuisine in Dallas from a repurposed soft-serve ice cream machine.

1980s

1980 Whole Foods Market opens its first store in Austin.

1983 After more than 10 years of research, Texas A&M University creates a supersweet onion called the 1015, named after the ideal date for planting—October 15.

1985 The electric bread maker makes life easier for those who don’t want to do it by hand.

1990s

1991 Salsa overtakes ketchup in sales to become the nation’s condiment of choice.

1994 The George Foreman Lean Mean Fat-Reducing Grilling Machine, named after the former heavyweight boxing champion from Houston, debuts. Sales have surpassed 150 million.

1998 Cute little grape tomatoes show up in groceries.

2000s

2006 Anna Ginsberg of Austin, who later became Texas Co-op Power food editor, wins the Pillsbury Bake-Off with her recipe for Baked Chicken and Spinach Stuffing.

2017 Mexican mineral water Topo Chico gains a cultlike following in Texas. Coca-Cola purchases the brand.

Soccer Superstar Heads Home

Clint Dempsey became the first American soccer player to score a hat trick in England’s top soccer league in 2012. After that, he became the highest-paid American player in the U.K. and scored more goals than any other American in any top-tier European league. He has appeared in 140 international matches for the U.S. national team and scored 57 international goals, tying the U.S. record. He’s been called the greatest American soccer player of all time.

He grew up going to church with his grandmother in Nacogdoches. And after a 15-year career, Dempsey announced his retirement in August.

What now? Locals expect to see the international superstar back in East Texas, where his family still lives. “It’s where you’re from, it’s your roots, and that’s why I like to get back to Nacogdoches in the offseason and hang out with my family,” Dempsey told The Seattle Times in 2013. “To me, it keeps me grounded and reminds me of how far I’ve come.”

A HIDDEN MAN'S GEM

Eccentric hermit ELMER KLEB helped transform his family homestead near Houston into a woodland preserve

ELMER KLEB didn't like school. The truth is he didn't like people much, either. What he did like were birds, trees and solitude. His preferred companion was a black buzzard with a broken wing that lived with him in his run-down house on 133 acres. The buzzard apparently didn't mind that the century-old dwelling had no electricity or running water.

"When I first visited the property, I was immediately enchanted with both the site and the hermit who owned it, Elmer Kleb," says Andrew Sansom, then executive director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, who visited the home for the first time in the late 1980s.

Despite his eccentric and reclusive lifestyle, Kleb left something priceless for the people of Texas. "I learned that Mr. Kleb had inherited the land when it was a cultivated field," Sansom says, "and he spent his life finding native trees and other vegetation and replanting them on his land so that when I got there, it was a lovely mature woodland."

Today, Kleb Woods Nature Preserve, 8 miles west of Tomball and 40 miles northwest of Houston, offers a rare commodity: silence. Silence, lightly seasoned with birdsong. The preserve attracts bird-watchers, hikers and nature enthusiasts from around the world. The story of why this secluded hideaway exists at all is as eccentric as its former owner.

Kleb's great-grandfather, Conrad Kleb, emigrated to northwest Harris County from Germany in 1846. He purchased 107 acres and established a family farm. Andreas, one of Conrad's 14 children, bought a separate farm in 1871 for about $250 near Muschke Road, close to the German immigrant community of Rose Hill. Edward, Andreas' son, and wife Minnie inherited the farm from Andreas in 1903, grew vegetables and cotton, raised cattle and sheep, and built a simple wood-frame house on the property. They had two children, Elmer and Myrtle.

Left: A massive live oak at Kleb Woods Nature Preserve. Right: A sign shows Elmer Kleb, former owner of the property that became the nature preserve.

His property was worth an estimated $750,000, yet Kleb was penniless.

ELMER, born in 1907, and Myrtle, in 1913, attended Rose Hill School, but Elmer didn't get along with other boys and became the target of bullies who taunted him with the name "Lumpy." He quit school sometime between the fourth and seventh grades (family stories are not precise) to help his parents on the farm. He rarely left the property thereafter.

"Elmer had a condition that was eventually recognized as a form of autism," says Fred Collins, director of the Kleb Woods Nature Preserve. Collins has invested years researching the Kleb family and restoring the site's dilapidated buildings. "When asked to do something," Collins says, "Elmer would insist on an explanation of why the job had to be done. Without that explanation, he wouldn't tackle the task."

Kleb inherited the farm after his parents and sister died. With no one left to explain what jobs needed to be done, he stopped maintaining the property. Grapevines and trees, most of them planted by Kleb and his father, grew uncontrolled.

"Elmer no longer maintained the fences," Collins says, "and allowed his livestock to wander freely, getting into neighbors' crops and gardens. Eventually the county sheriff rounded them up and sold them."

A small man with tangled gray hair and a long beard, Kleb was considered “peculiar” by neighbors, as his mother had been. His sister, Myrtle, endured periodic bouts with mental illness and died in her early 20s.

Kleb never married and had no children. With no source of income, he had to rely on relatives and friends for food and money, occasionally making forays into his neighbors’ gardens uninvited. Collins explains that although Kleb did drive as late as the 1970s, in later years, he walked wherever he went. When yaupon and pine trees grew up around the windmill and prevented the blades from turning and pumping water, even the single cold-water faucet stopped working.

As Kleb withdrew from the surrounding community, North Houston’s suburban population exploded. Property values and taxes soared. Kleb didn’t understand why he needed to pay taxes, so he didn’t.

When tax collectors came to the property, Kleb vanished into the thick woods until they left. Even though he didn’t open the tax statements—after his death, a collection of unopened tax bills was found in a trunk—Kleb knew something had to be done. In 1986, he wrote a letter to the Houston chapter of the Audubon Society asking for help. Members of the Audubon Society tried to raise the money to pay the tax lien that, in 1988, was $170,000—but the effort failed.

His property was worth an estimated $750,000, yet Kleb was penniless. Over the years, relatives tried to persuade him to sell a small part of his acreage to save the rest. He refused. After the Audubon Society failed to raise the funds to pay the past-due taxes, a county judge declared Kleb incompetent and ordered the property to be sold.

Steve Radack, a Harris County commissioner, intervened to prevent the immediate sale. That’s when Terry O’Rourke, Harris County assistant district attorney, contacted Sansom at TPWD.

“We managed to arrange a grant to Harris County, which paid the taxes, provided Mr. Kleb with the means to live out the rest of his life out of poverty and establish a wonderful park in his name,” says Sansom, now the executive director of the Meadows Center for Water and the Environment at Texas State University.

The grant from TPWD amounted to $737,500. With that money, Harris County purchased the land in 1991, paid off the tax bill and set up a trust to take care of Kleb. As Sansom notes, Harris County commissioners allowed Kleb to remain in the house for the rest of his life. Although plans to transform the Kleb woods into a nature preserve got underway during his later years, the acreage surrounding the house remained untouched until Kleb’s death in 1999 at the age of 91.

“Texas Parks and Wildlife contacted me at the beginning of this saga and asked me if I could try to meet with Elmer,” says Ted Eubanks, then president of the Houston chapter of the National Audubon Society. “I went out to the property and found him, and within a short time struck an unlikely friendship with him. He would call me at home—he would walk to the nearby store to use their phone—and talk endlessly about wanting to save his property as a preserve.”

KLEB left an indelible mark on Sansom, too. “For many years, I kept a photograph of the old gentleman on my wall in the executive office at Parks and Wildlife to remind me of his life’s work and the privilege of having known him and playing a small role in helping him accomplish his dream,” Sansom says.

Kleb Woods Nature Preserve, located in northwest Harris County on FM 2920, is open from 7 a.m. until dusk. Visitors may wander among the restored historic farm buildings or take shady trails that lead through towering pine and oak forests and scattered wetlands. A new nature center houses an auditorium and classroom, which attracts groups interested in birding and local history.

“Kleb Woods offers a unique sanctuary in the midst of an urban landscape,” says park visitor Cynthia Beman. “Walking the trails, enveloped by the trees, birds and verdant heart of the woods, one can certainly understand Elmer Kleb’s tenacious hold on the land and can almost feel his presence. It is easy to picture him sitting on the porch of his home, completely at peace with his surroundings.”

Today, Kleb Woods opens a window into the environmental and cultural history of Harris County. The preserve exists because of an unlikely alliance of environmentalists, government officials and lawyers who helped a reclusive man save his beloved wilderness from becoming another subdivided housing development.

Martha Deeringer, a member of Heart of Texas EC, lives near McGregor.

Wildlife spotted at Kleb Woods includes, clockwise from top, bluejays, red-shouldered hawks, bullfrogs and ruby-throated hummingbirds.

hen my three kids were little, we made several trips from Austin to Aquarena Springs in San Marcos.

They marveled at fish and turtles beneath glass-bottom boats, wiggled enough to frighten me in our sky-ride gondola car and spent their allowances in the gift shop. Once, we even stayed in the cotton-candy colored hotel overlooking the water. It was low-key, affordable family fun.

Recently, I returned to see how this place has transformed into the Meadows Center for Water and the Environment, a Texas State University research and conservation facility.

The center kept the glass-bottom boats, and I was happy to spot the familiar springs, bubbling up through sand like boiling pots of Cream of Wheat. Some 200 springs in Spring Lake create the headwaters of the San Marcos River, and the water sometimes reaches 40 feet deep. But through the glass-bottom boats, the lake floor looks close enough to touch, the water still gin clear thanks to filtering through limestone and a flow that completely refreshes the lake about every 24 hours.

Our boat driver tells a story similar to the one my kids heard when they were young, including a boast that this area is widely regarded as one of the oldest continually inhabited sites in North America, its first occupants arriving nearly 12,000 years ago. Native peoples gathered here regularly, and the first Europeans arrived in 1691. In 1831, colonial Spanish governor Juan Martín de Veramendi received a land grant around the springs. His heirs sold some of the land to Nathaniel Lewis in 1840, and in 1845, Lewis sold to Gen. Edward Burleson. Burleson dammed the river to form Spring Lake and used the outflow to operate a gristmill.

Opposite page: Postcards tout some attractions from the onetime Aquarena Springs. Above: A floating boardwalk over restored wetlands at the Meadows Center for Water and the Environment.

Local businessman A.B. Rogers purchased this tract in 1926 and built the Spring Lake Park Hotel, later called the Landmark Inn. His son Paul Rogers founded Aquarena Springs Resort in 1949, adding the boats and putting in a submersible theater where visitors watched mermaids and Ralph the Swimming Pig perform. The sky ride went up around 1959. By the 1970s, the resort drew 250,000 visitors a year and employed more than 200 people.

By the 1980s, when I first brought my kids, the park looked a little down on its luck. “The Rogerses were pioneers, but they couldn’t compete with the second generation of tourism destinations,” says Andrew Sansom, former director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and current Meadows Center director. The family sold to an investor, who offered to sell to TPWD. The department didn't see an amusement park fitting its mission, though, and passed.

In 1994, what was then Southwest Texas State University bought the property. "President Jerry Supple understood this is a globally significant site and something bad would happen to it unless he acted," Sansom says. "There is no other university in the world with anything like this on its campus."

With the San Marcos community concerned about the economic impact of losing Aquarena Springs, the university kept it open at first. But that didn't work. In 2005, the university, now Texas State, created the Meadows Center and brought Sansom on board.

By 2014, almost every trace of Aquarena Springs had disappeared—the sky ride dismantled; the submarine theater removed; and the gift shop, restaurant and outbuildings demolished. A $5 million project had created several miles of nature trails and a floating boardwalk over restored wetlands.

"San Marcos is one of the fastest-growing cities in the United States, so the issue of the economic impact became moot," Sansom says. "And we still have 125,000 visitors each year."

I can see why. In addition to the boat tours, visitors can enjoy indoor displays, which include endangered Texas blind salamanders, and an interactive exhibit about the Edwards Aquifer, as well as the outdoor trails and boardwalks. Plans call for turning an entire floor of the old inn into a visitors and research venue. The Meadows Center conducts water-related research around the world, including on the Edwards Aquifer and endangered species in Spring Lake.

I return one more time, to kayak, an experience offered in partnership with REI Outdoor School, along with stand-up paddleboard lessons and special tours, including under a full moon.

Apart from the glass-bottom boat tours, these outings provide the only public access to the lake.

I spot herons and egrets on the shore. Under the clear water, largemouth bass, redbreast sunfish, Rio Grande cichlids and toothy spotted gar swim among forests of furry-stalked cabomba and long-leafed arrowhead grass. The center has dramatically increased the population of endangered Texas wild rice, found nowhere else on the planet, and the lake boasts one of the highest concentrations of turtles anywhere.

THE NEXT GREAT ITALIAN MASTERPIECE

The Argento Byzantine Bracelet is an impeccable work of art with a price unmatched by any in its class.

Raffinato™
Italy

Da Vinci's Mona Lisa, David by Michelangelo, Madame Butterfly by Puccini. Italy has produced some of the world's greatest masterpieces. And, it's no secret it is the epicenter of the best metalworking on earth. Which is why we sought out one of the best artisans to ever melt precious metals to create yet another great Italian masterpiece. For over two decades, Fabio Aguti has pursued his passion for making jewelry of great beauty inspired by the Tuscan countryside. The Argento Bracelet is his latest masterpiece. And, you can own it for under $40!

Each bracelet is meticulously made by hand from pure sterling silver and celebrates the traditional woven Byzantine design— an intricate array of woven links that forms a flexible and elegant drape. Passing the test of time and surpassing the definition of beauty, the Argento Byzantine Bracelet is perfect for the lady who appreciates fine art. And, priced for those who appreciate a fine value.

The difference between priceless & overpriced. While shopping for bracelets, I spotted a 7" woven sterling silver Byzantine bracelet with a big designer name for $250. Ridiculous. It wasn't Italian made. It wasn't near as nice. High-end design shouldn't carry a high price just because of a big name designer name up-charge.

No questions asked, 30-day money back guarantee. We want you glowing with satisfaction.

Masterpiece, not mass produced. Because each bracelet is handmade in Italy— taking months to create— we only have a select number available. Don't miss this opportunity to own a piece of impeccable Italian-made jewelry for a truly amazing price. Call today!

Smoothing Out Winter Bills

MESSAGE FROM
GENERAL MANAGER ALAN LESLEY

AS WE TRUDGE THROUGH WHAT CAN BE THE COLDEST AND dreariest part of winter, we at Comanche Electric Cooperative wish to remind our members that the season's chilly temperatures and shortened days frequently lead to increased electricity usage at home, which can cause uncomfortable spikes in electric bills. You can soften the blow by expecting at least a modest increase in power bills compared to bills from the fall, of course, and adjusting your household's monthly budget to make up the difference. But you also can employ a few strategies to smooth out those upcoming bills.

Now that the holiday blitz of parties and gatherings is mostly behind us, elaborate dinners and dishes can take a back seat. Pull out your slow cooker from the back of your pantry and put it to work. Meals made in a slow cooker or pressure cooker typically use less energy than those cooked in a conventional oven. Plus, hearty stews and braised dishes make the perfect comforting accompaniments to a cold winter's night.

Unplugging chargers that aren't charging anything is another opportunity for significant savings. Once your cellphone, tablet or other device is fully charged, unplug the charger. Otherwise, it still draws a small but measurable amount of power that adds to your bill at no benefit to you or your electronics.

A final quick tip for hedging against billing peaks: If you don't use a smart thermostat to control your home's heating and air conditioning system, install one. If that's not practical at the moment, make a habit of decreasing the temperature in your home by around 10 degrees before leaving for work in the morning and before turning in for the night. When the decrease in energy used for heating your home is sustained for eight hours, the savings really can add up.

As always, CECA wants to partner with you in minimizing your energy spending while maximizing the value you derive from it.

“You are never too old to set another goal or to dream a new dream.”

—C.S. Lewis, British writer and theologian

We wish you and yours a happy, healthy and joy-filled 2019. Comanche EC will be closed Tuesday, January 1, in observance of the holiday.

Future Leaders in Training

BY SHIRLEY KIDD DUKES

“THIS IS AMAZING!” SAID ROXANNA THIEBAUD, ENGLISH TEACHER at De Leon High School, as she watched junior students take part in the 2018 Comanche Electric Cooperative Association Student Leadership Conference. “I can’t get my work done for watching the kids!”

Eighty-six students from nine schools attended the one-day training, sponsored and facilitated by CECA, which introduces high school students to different aspects of leadership as well as habits that will propel them to greater leadership roles. Role models and mentors enhance those skills by leading students through hands-on exercises, speaking opportunities and fun-filled activities.

Among the activities were thought-provoking projects that encouraged the students to dig deep and make some tough decisions, not only about their lives but also about the lives of others. The participants took these tasks very seriously, sometimes fighting for what they believed was right and sometimes accepting the reasoning behind other students’ arguments. One very personal activity found the students extremely quiet and serious as they made a series of increasingly tough hypothetical choices concerning loved ones and cherished memories, causing them to reflect deeply on what they held dearest.

But not all the activities were so serious. Some reinforced the importance of giving back to the community. During a team-building exercise, students assembled nine bicycles that were then presented to Santa’s Helpers and Brown County Good Samaritan Ministries to be distributed to local children. Through another activity, the students raised $61 to donate to area food banks.

The Projects

At the close of the day, the students were encouraged to formulate a detailed plan for a community action project within their school or town. Students from the following schools designed these projects for their communities:

Bangs Santa Sleigh: Students will reinstate a former CECA Student Leadership mentorship program. Students will dress up as Christmas characters and spread holiday cheer by reading Christmas stories to J.B. Stephens Elementary School students. In addition to reinstating the program, students plan to amplify the program's previous efforts and have already set up a meeting with the elementary school's administration to approve their plan.

Blanket toy drive: The Blanket High School junior class hosted a toy drive from Monday, November 26, through Friday, December 14. Large, festively wrapped boxes were set up in the elementary and high school buildings for donations. In addition, a drop-off box was set up at the Whistle Stop General Store to give townspeople the opportunity to participate. To encourage more participation, grades competed against one another to collect the most toys, with winning classes from the elementary, junior high and high schools. The grade with the most toys in each category won a pizza party. On December 14, the group delivered toys to Brownwood Toys for Tots and Comanche Santa's Helpers.

Comanche street patrol: With the help of the fifth-grade class, students will clear Comanche's streets and neighborhoods of litter and recyclable items in bar ditches and rights-of-way to beautify the town and hopefully inspire residents to continue the effort.

De Leon coat drive: During a recent program, these students became aware of kids without heavy winter coats during 23-degree weather.

These students plan to help procure winter coats, gloves, hats and scarves for those who need them. They will ask the community for donations of gently used items through the newspaper, social media and the chamber of commerce. The students' winter wear drive will be open to the public two days per week for two weeks in the high school's foyer.

Gorman G Team: The Gorman leadership team chose to decorate downtown businesses for the Christmas season. The goal of the G Team is for downtown to present an appealing stop for photos as people drive through to look at holiday lights. The leadership team received permission from their principal, Vanessa Oakley, to form a student organization and created a flyer asking for donations of lights and decorations from the community. After contacting several people to help them coordinate their decorations, the team gathered supplies and spread the word about when to start putting up the decorations. They also solicited assistance from Gorman's community events committee to work with them on displaying the decorations as well as the Gorman economic development committee for possible funding.

May Don't Let May Decay: The group devised a community beautification project that will include painting buildings downtown and mowing and cleaning up around them, as well as painting a mural on one of the buildings. They will recruit as many student and civic groups as possible to do the work, including but not limited to 4-H, athletics, band, elementary student council, youth baseball and football organizations, and the May Volunteer Fire Department. The students' vision is for the whole community to come together to enrich the place they all love.

Priddy: Priddy's community action project has a phase one that begins immediately and phase two that begins in the spring. For the first phase, a partnership was formed among Priddy Independent School District's National Honor Society chapter, the district's floral design class and Aleshia Fiester's Daycare of Comanche to give flowers and Christmas cards to each resident of the Hillview Manor Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Goldthwaite. For the second phase, the school's administration has given permission for a sock and button drive for the spring. Students will collect socks for each resident along with buttons to make Christmas trees for each resident next year. This service project will combine the efforts of students from pre-K through 12th grade, the National Honor Society, the floral design class, the communities of Priddy and Comanche, and potentially CECA.

Rising Star winter clothing drive: Rising Star students held a winter clothes drive for members of the community who needed warm clothing. Donation boxes decorated as eye-catching Christmas packages were placed in local businesses to collect items. Lists were posted next to the boxes so those donating could be aware of individual needs. Students matched donations and delivered the items via school and church connections.

“Thank you for your encouragement in this,” said Kristi Keierleber of Rising Star. “It is perfect for one of my classes right now because we are ready to begin a unit on family and community service.”

You can support the students in your community by contacting their school and volunteering to be a part of their community action project. The next CECA Student Leadership Conference is tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, November 13. If you know of a student who will be a junior and could benefit from the conference, have them contact Shirley at 1-800-915-2533 or sdukes@ceca.coop, or they can speak with their school counselor.

Supporting Your Children, One Donation at a Time

THROUGH PARTICIPATING MEMBERS' GENEROUS DONATIONS to the CECA Operation Round Up program, CECA is able throughout the year to offer assistance to organizations and groups throughout the co-op's seven-county service territory. Below are some of the most recent donations. These organizations send a huge thank-you to the members who participated.

4-H Food Service Projects: Sixty-six youths are registered in the local 4-H chapter, which depends entirely on donations and fundraisers. These donations and fundraisers determine which and how many activities the chapter's members can participate in. Through Operation Round Up, CECA donated $250 to aid the chapter in its goal of developing youths' citizenship, leadership, responsibility and life skills through experiential learning programs and a positive youth development approach. Pictured at left are Comanche County Extension 4-H Program Assistant Amanda Scott, Tyson Scott, Cody Scott and Azalee Scott.

Angel Tree Project: Comanche Independent School District collected donations to provide items for those experiencing homelessness as well as economically disadvantaged students in pre-K through fifth grade. Each student in the program received a package of socks, a package of underwear, a jacket, shoes, toiletries, two warm outfits, beanies and gloves. Through Operation Round Up, CECA was able to donate $250. Pictured at left are Guinn Smith, Comanche Elementary School counselor, and Dawn Stewart, second-grade teacher.

Tomorrow's Memories Foundation/Christmas Skates: Tomorrow's Memories Foundation is a nonprofit organization benefiting children. Through the efforts of local residents, an ice rink will be assembled each year for the Christmas season at the Comanche Community Center beneath Christmas lights and decor for all visitors to enjoy. Ice skates will be provided for all skaters. Pictured at left is Clint Tunnell, volunteer for Tomorrow's Memories Foundation.

SNOW AND ICE AREN'T Always Nice

Although much of the state is unaccustomed to snow and ice, temperatures can fall below freezing even in Texas, potentially causing power outages. To keep safe and comfortable during a winter power outage:

Report any outages.

Turn off electrical appliances that were operating at the time the power went off. Leave one light on so you'll know when service has been restored.

Keep warm by closing off rooms you don't need and use only safe sources of heat, like a wood stove. Do not burn charcoal indoors. If you operate lanterns or fuel-fired cook stoves or heaters, make sure that you have adequate ventilation.

Don't drive unless absolutely necessary until conditions improve. If you must drive, go slowly.

Comanche Electric Cooperative encourages you to always practice safety.

Still Empowering People

Texas Co-op Power celebrates 75 years of chronicling the cooperative movement

BY ELLEN STADER

SOMEWHERE IN TINY ANYWHERE, TEXAS, a high school senior opens her laptop, plugs her phone into its charger and clicks Play on her study music playlist. She's applying for a college scholarship she learned about in a magazine; the application is almost ready. After a final read-through, she hits Send—and, with the help of high-speed internet, makes an investment in her future.

Nowhere in her mind is the fact that all this is possible because of her great-grandfather.

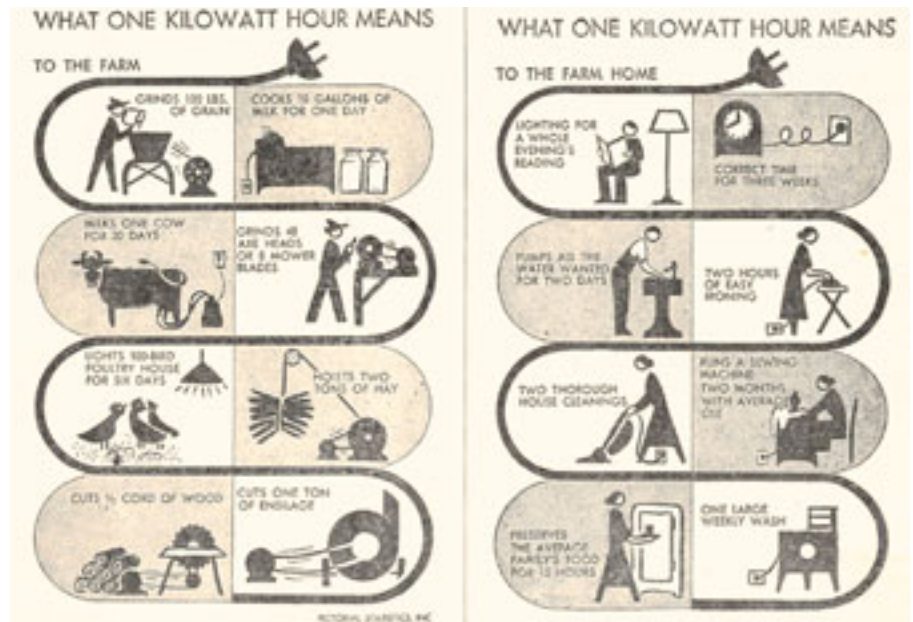

Her great-grandfather was one of thousands of Texans who banded together with neighbors in the 1930s and '40s to build cooperatives that would electrify their farms, transforming the countryside and economy. The magazine containing the scholarship information is Texas Co-op Power, which has chronicled the state's electric cooperative movement since 1944—and celebrates its 75th anniversary this year.

What started as four pages of newsprint titled Texas Cooperative Electric Power doubled to eight pages by the second issue. Circulation in the first year grew from 14,000 to 39,500 as the 49 co-ops affiliated with the Texas Power Reserve (later Texas Electric Cooperatives) continued to grow.

"It's a fascinating story this newspaper has set out to tell," read an editorial by the first editor, George W. Haggard. "In 1935 only three Texas farms in 100 had central station power—today, three in ten are solighted. Tomorrow, we hope to make it well-nigh universal."

WEB EXTRAS

► Read this story on our website to see a timeline that puts the creation of Texas Co-op Power in perspective.

Written for a population poised to join in the war effort and postwar prosperity, Texas Cooperative Electric Power articles took a forward-looking tone. In February 1945, the name was changed to Texas Co-op Power. Columns like March 1945's War Duty Checklist encouraged readers to make "every kilowatt you use do a real war job."

After World War II, rural electrification pushed full speed ahead alongside the economy. Ads aimed at newly prosperous members offered appliances to improve home life and expand farm production. The magazine added "women's pages," filled with household tips for using new products and recipes to be cooked with electric stoves and ranges.

Pages were dedicated to developments at individual co-ops, and the words and faces of members appeared. A 1945 contest asked for essays answering the question, "How has electricity helped you?" One winner's moving response told of her daughter, born prematurely, who survived only because of the incubator that enclosed her first weeks of life. "Lyndah Nell will be 3 this month and is in perfect health," the Limestone County mother wrote.

Rural electrification eventually reached all corners of the state, and co-op members acquired the conveniences of modern homes and farms. Texas Co-op Power's focus shifted from the wonders of electricity to advice on using it safely and efficiently. Industry- and government-focused articles were replaced by stories covering travel, food, gardening and other topics of general interest.

Form changed with function, too. In 1960, two-color printing brought the publication a fresh look, but 1992 saw the most visible transition when the format changed to a full-color magazine. Photo and recipe contests became a staple, as did statewide events listings. Then the 21st century came calling with a Texas Co-op Power website and Facebook page, allowing more interaction between the magazine and its readers.

In some ways, not much has changed. The technology is new, sure, but the magazine still strives to cover topics important to co-op members. Throughout this anniversary year, Texas Co-op Power delves into its 75 years of archives to see how its past informs its present and builds foundations for its future.

Sunny Citrus

EVERYONE KNOWS CELEBRATIONS call for dessert, and to ring in Texas Co-op Power's 75th anniversary, we're raiding our archives. Each month, we'll feature a retro recipe tweaked to accommodate evolving tastes and cooking methods. To kick off January's citrus recipes, we're sharing a Frozen Lime Pie. The recipe that ran in July 1950 featured bright green gelatin, courtesy of food coloring, and called for freezing the filling in ice cube trays before thawing it and beating until smooth. To streamline the process, we're relying on frozen limeade and sweetened condensed milk to create a refreshing, tart-sweet pie that everyone will love.

PAULA DISBROWE, FOOD EDITOR

Frozen Lime Pie

CRUST

- 1½ cups graham cracker crumbs
- ¼ cup sugar
- 6 tablespoons (¾ stick) unsalted butter, melted

FILLING

- 1 container (6 ounces) frozen limeade concentrate, thawed
 - ½ can (7 ounces) sweetened condensed milk
 - 4 ounces sour cream
 - 4 ounces frozen whipped topping
- Grated lime zest or sliced limes, for garnish

1. CRUST: Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine the graham crumbs, sugar and butter in a bowl. Press the mixture into a 9-inch pie dish, making sure the sides and bottom are even in thickness, and bake 10 minutes, until fragrant and golden. Cool completely on a wire rack.

2. FILLING: Combine the limeade and milk in a large bowl. Using a rubber spatula, fold in the sour cream and whipped topping until the mixture is smooth. Pour the mixture into the

MILLIE KIRCHOFF | NUECES EC

With orange, grapefruit and Meyer lemon trees in her backyard, Kirchoff doesn't have to look far for citrus inspiration. Her fragrant quick bread makes for a delicious breakfast or midafternoon snack.

Lemon Thyme Tea Bread

BREAD

- ¾ cup milk
 - 1 tablespoon chopped lemon balm
 - 1 tablespoon chopped lemon thyme
 - 2 cups flour
 - ½ teaspoons baking powder
 - ¼ teaspoon salt
 - 6 tablespoons (¾ stick) butter, softened to room temperature
 - 1 cup sugar
 - 2 eggs, room temperature
 - 1 tablespoon grated lemon zest
- Additional lemon thyme for garnish

LEMON GLAZE

Juice of 2 lemons

- ½ cups powdered sugar, plus more as desired for consistency

1. BREAD: Preheat oven to 325 degrees and apply butter or nonstick cooking spray to a 9-by-5-inch loaf pan. Heat the milk and the chopped herbs in a small, heavy saucepan until the mixture is hot but not simmering. Remove from heat and allow the mixture to steep until cool.

2. Combine the flour, baking powder and salt in a bowl. In a separate bowl, cream the butter and gradually add the sugar, beating until the mixture is light and fluffy. Add the eggs, one at a time, then beat in the lemon zest. Combine the flour mixture by sections with the herbed milk and mix until the batter is just blended. Use a rubber spatula to transfer the batter to the prepared pan. Smooth the top and bake 50–60 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted in the center of the loaf comes out clean.

3. LEMON GLAZE: Meanwhile, combine the lemon juice and 1 cup of powdered sugar in a bowl and whisk until smooth. Add remaining ½ cup of sugar and whisk again, until the mixture is thick and glossy but still pourable. Add additional powdered sugar as desired for consistency.

4. Cool bread in the pan on a wire rack placed over a baking sheet for 5 minutes, then run a knife around the inside of the pan, inverting the loaf and removing from pan. Drizzle the lemon glaze over the top of the warm cake and allow it to cool completely. Garnish with additional lemon thyme sprigs, if desired. ▶ Makes one 9-by-5-inch loaf.

$100 Recipe Contest

June's recipe contest topic is Standout Summer Sides. What do you like to serve alongside ribs, burgers and other summer entrées? The deadline is January 10. Readers whose recipes are featured will receive a special Texas Co-op Power apron.

prepared pie crust and freeze overnight. Garnish with lime zest or lime slices if desired. ▶ Serves 8.

COOK'S TIP If time is of the essence, feel free to use a prepared store-bought graham cracker or pastry pie crust.

Lavender Lemon Cookies With Lemon Glaze

AMY STRAIN | DEEP EAST TEXAS EC

Aromatic lavender is famous for its soothing qualities, and these cookies are no exception. Speckled with pale purple buds and drizzled with lemony glaze, these elegant cookies have a delicate texture and wonderful perfume. Strain uses buds from Chappell Hill Lavender Farm and describes the results as "small treats that pack a huge citrus punch."

COOKIES

- 2½ cups flour
 - ½ teaspoon baking powder
 - 1 cup (2 sticks) butter
 - ½ cup sugar, plus ¼ cup for rolling (optional)
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- Finely grated zest and juice of 2 lemons, divided use
- 1 egg, room temperature
 - 1 tablespoon lavender culinary buds, plus extra for garnish (optional)

LEMON GLAZE

- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- ½ cup powdered sugar

1. COOKIES: Preheat oven to 350 degrees and line two baking sheets with parchment. Combine the flour and baking powder in a bowl and set aside.

2. In a separate bowl (or stand mixer), cream the butter and sugar until light and fluffy, then mix in the vanilla, lemon zest and 2 teaspoons lemon juice. Mix in the egg, then gradually add the flour mixture and lavender buds, mixing until just combined.

3. At this point, you can roll the dough into a log and slice (or wrap with plastic and refrigerate until you're ready to bake) or shape it into balls, each slightly larger than a quarter. Coat the dough slices or roll the dough balls in additional sugar and place them on the prepared baking sheets (pressing each ball down slightly with a fork). Bake the cookies about 14 minutes, or until lightly golden, then cool on a wire rack.

4. LEMON GLAZE: Whisk together lemon juice and powdered sugar until smooth. Drizzle the glaze over the cooled cookies and garnish with additional lavender buds if desired. ▶ Makes about 36 cookies.

COOK'S TIP Strain grinds the lavender buds in a coffee grinder that she cleans with rice beforehand. But you'll also get delicious results (and a pretty cookie) using whole buds.

Grapefruit Pie

SUE WEST | WISE COUNTY EC

Lemon meringue pie is a classic; this clever variation uses fresh grapefruit. West showed us how the tang of pink grapefruit complements a cloud of meringue. To give the custard a firmer texture, chill the baked pie for at least two hours before serving. Note that this pie is made with a pre-baked crust.

PIE

1 pink grapefruit
 $\frac{2}{3}$ cup plus 1 tablespoon sugar, divided use
 $\frac{1}{3}$ cup cornstarch
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt
 $1\frac{1}{4}$ cups fresh grapefruit juice
 $\frac{3}{4}$ cup water
 3 egg yolks
 2 tablespoons butter
 One 9-inch pie crust, baked

MERINGUE

5 egg whites
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon cream of tartar
 $\frac{2}{3}$ cup sugar

- 1. PIE: Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Use a knife to trim the peel from grapefruit, then slice into segments (discarding seeds and white membrane). Sprinkle the fruit with 1 tablespoon of sugar and refrigerate while you make the pie.
- 2. Combine $\frac{2}{3}$ cup sugar, cornstarch and salt in a saucepan over medium heat. Gradually whisk in the grapefruit juice and water. Lightly beat egg yolks and whisk into the juice mixture. Bring the mixture to a boil, stirring frequently. Boil 1 minute, stirring constantly, and then stir in the butter and remove from heat. Place the baked pie crust on a baking sheet, pour in the custard and set aside while you prepare the meringue.

3. MERINGUE: Beat the egg whites and cream of tartar on high speed until foamy. Add sugar, a tablespoon at a time, until stiff peaks form. Spread the meringue over the filling, sealing to the edge of the crust. Bake the pie 28 minutes, or until the meringue is lightly browned. Transfer the pie to a wire rack to cool, then serve with the chilled grapefruit segments. ▶ Serves 8.

North Texas Rail Yard

Cleburne's mural and museums hark back to the town's transportation and Native American past

BY GENE FOWLER

AS I ADMIRING THE VINTAGE STOREFRONTS around Cleburne's courthouse square, a faded soda pop bottle and hamburger sign at the tiny Burger Bar luncheonette caught my eye. "Every couple of months, someone will stop in wanting to buy the sign," said Katy Grantges, owner of the beloved eatery. The minirestaurant's building dates to 1902, when it served as the office for a wagon yard and livery stable. "They used to sell Model T's here, but it's been the Burger Bar since 1949."

"My mother used to come here and get seven burgers for a dollar," testified the diner sitting next to me in one of the Burger Bar's four counter seats as I munched my cheeseburger. "My boy lives in Corsicana," offered a customer waiting for takeout, "and the first thing he does whenever he comes home is head for the Burger Bar."

After lunch, a mural near Cleburne's square depicting historic local sites and events guided my exploration. Created by Texas artist Styfle Read, it features a gleaming, steaming locomotive that commemorates the railroad's local impact.

The Cleburne Railroad Museum tells the story of the rail lines and repair shops that served as the city's largest employer for nearly a century. Attired in a dapper conductor's uniform, R.A. McAlister told me the story of the Santa Fe Railroad establishing machine shops in Cleburne when its Galveston headquarters were quarantined because of yellow fever in 1898.

"When the train left Galveston heading north, looking for a place to set up temporary offices and shops, every community it stopped at greeted it with shotguns and 'keep moving' commands," said McAlister. "But when they reached Cleburne, the mayor met them with a brass band. It was a sad day here in 1989 when they closed the shops."

The Burger Bar downtown draws a lunch crowd that overflows its 169 square feet.

Read's action portrait of baseball great Tris Speaker recalls the Hall of Famer's first team, the minor-league champion Cleburne Railroaders of 1906. A reborn Railroaders club took to the field of dreams in 2017, playing home games at a sparkling new park called the Depot at Cleburne Station.

The mural includes rangy longhorns and a rangier cowpoke that evoke a cattle drive route west of town that was known as part of the Chisholm Trail. Johnson County's original log cabin courthouse, built in 1854, still stands among the pioneer buildings in Cleburne's Chisholm Trail Outdoor Museum.

Caddo Indian settlements depicted in the mural inspire a visit to the Big Bear Native American Museum and to the Layland Museum.

In a 1905 Greek Revival structure built as a Carnegie library, the Layland houses the collection of plumber William J. Layland, who took time off every summer to gather relics. Among the hundreds of artifacts, you'll see Hopi katsina figures and a late reservation-era Lakota beaded buckskin dress.

Mural work is a Read family signature, and until recently, Read's father, Sleepy Read, painted in his publicly accessible studio in the Wright Building, a mini-mall near Styfle's mural. Another stop on the square, the Published Page bookstore, specializes in vintage sci-fi, Texana and Western history.

Sleepy Read's mural adorns the hallways of the J.N. Long Cultural Arts Complex, a former public school built in 1915. The complex offers changing exhibits and serves as the permanent home of the Texas Woodcarvers Guild Museum.

A scene at Buffalo Springs in Styfle's mural sent me back to a favorite Cleburne spot, a brick-lined spring on Buffalo Creek, right off U.S. 67, where indigenous people and wildlife came for water, followed by explorers, soldiers and pioneers. Even Sam Houston is said to have visited the spring.

"The creek transports the spirits of those who take the time to listen and see the great blue herons, sunfish and other wildlife," said Julie Winchell, city environmental coordinator. "Buffalo Creek is a treasure."
