Count on Lineworkers

ELECTRIC CO-OPS proudly celebrate their lineworkers, even proclaiming the second Monday in April—April 11 this year—as National Lineworker Appreciation Day.

Co-op members, too, are quick to look up to lineworkers.

When we asked readers to finish this sentence—“The hardest job in the world has to be ...”—Pablo Sanchez, a Magic Valley Electric Cooperative member, was the first to respond:

“Being a lineman during cold weather. Knowing someone is counting on Magic Valley to keep us warm.”

“Genius is 1% inspiration, 99% perspiration.”

Not Fade Away

I grew up on an Iowa farm about 20 miles south of where Buddy Holly and the others met their end [A Glimpse of Buddy Holly, February 2022]. I was 11 then. We didn't learn of the crash until we got to school. All the girls were crying, dashing in and out of the restroom to wash their tears away, only to cry even more as others came through the doors and were told of the crash. Some were so upset they even went home.

Royal Recollection

Our Stephenville neighbor June Shannon was personally invited by Queen Elizabeth II to visit her in Austin in 1991 [Her Majesty's Visit, February 2022]. What do you take the queen to welcome her to Texas? A pecan pie, of course. June baked a pie and enjoyed it with her majesty over tea. June, our Stephenville High School English teacher, was selected to read her poem Happiness Is at the queen's silver jubilee in London in 1977. There they became friends, sharing a love for country life.

Finally . . . a better mobility solution than Scooters or Power Chairs.

The Zoomer's versatile design and 1-touch joystick operation brings mobility and independence to those who need it most.

If you have mobility issues, or know someone who does, then you've experienced the difficulties faced by millions of Americans. Simple tasks like getting from the bedroom to the kitchen can become a time-consuming and potentially dangerous ordeal. You may have tried to solve the problem with a power chair or a scooter but neither is ideal. Power chairs are bulky and look like a medical device. Scooters are either unstable or hard to maneuver. Now, there's a better alternative . . . the Zoomer.

My Zoomer is a delight to ride! It has increased my mobility in my apartment, my opportunities to enjoy the-out-of-doors, and enabled me to visit the homes of my children for longer periods of time. The various speeds of it match my need for safety, it is easy to turn, and I am most pleased with the freedom of movement it gives me.

Sincerely, A. Macon, Williamsburg, VA

After just one trip around your home in the Zoomer, you'll marvel at how easy it is to navigate. It is designed to maneuver in tight spaces like doorways, between furniture, and around corners. It can go over thresholds and works great on any kind of floor or carpet. It's not bulky or cumbersome, so it can roll right up to a table or desk – there's no need to transfer to a chair. Its sturdy yet lightweight aluminum frame makes it durable and comfortable. Its dual motors power it at up to 3.7 miles per hour and its automatic electromagnetic brakes stop on a dime. The rechargeable battery powers it for up to 8 miles on a single charge. Plus, its exclusive foldable design enables you to transport it easily and even store it in a closet or under a bed when it's not in use.

Why spend another day letting mobility issues hamper your lifestyle? Call now and find out how you can have your very own Zoomer.

Heroes Next Door

Seventy-five years after the Texas City disaster, those who rushed in haven't been forgotten

BY BILL MINUTAGLIO

SEVERAL YEARS AGO, I received a message that just didn't seem right: An indomitable and indestructible Texan, someone so brave it felt like he could live forever, had passed away.

He was a former soldier who had fought in some of the deadliest moments of World War II. And then, after surviving the ravages of battle, he and others had stared down what some have called the greatest human-made tragedy of 20th-century America—an event that came to be called the Texas City disaster.

COURTESY WOODSON RESEARCH CENTER, FONDREN LIBRARY, RICE UNIVERSITY

Curtis Trahan had lived through so many things that it wasn't all that unusual to assume he could march on and on. But his family let me know that he had indeed succumbed. They wondered if I would speak at his memorial service.

Of course, I agreed—while knowing it would be virtually impossible to give proper tribute to him and all the other ordinary folks in Texas City who displayed unyielding courage, empathy and humanity during the most profound tragedy imaginable.

Tall and soft-spoken, Trahan was mayor of the small port town near Houston on April 16, 1947. That morning, as kids and families gathered to watch firefighters tackle what seemed like a small fire on a dock, there was suddenly a massive explosion.

It was what some imagined an atomic bomb blast to be like. Others simply thought that Judgment Day had abruptly arrived.

The earth rumbled and shuddered, oceangoing ships were heaved out of the water, buildings collapsed, airplanes were sucked from the sky—and hundreds of men, women and children instantly perished. Almost every member of the Texas City Fire Department was killed in the blink of an eye. Dozens and dozens of people were never seen again.

The final numbers were debated, but it appears that the Texas City disaster killed as many as 500. It's possible that more died but were never accounted for, and another 5,000 were injured. Dozens of human remains went unidentified.

Despite unrelenting fires, carnage and chaos, hundreds of people, including Trahan, raced to the scene. They organized rescue efforts, comforted the wounded and asked for help from lawmakers in Austin and Washington. They refused to sleep, marshaled volunteers and demanded answers for the pained community. So many Texans and more than a few souls from out of state stayed for weeks and months on end to treat the victims, donate blood, clear the rubble and help families search for loved ones.

The FBI arrived to investigate whether it had been some sort of attack. Soldiers were sent to restore order. Frank Sinatra agreed to do a fundraiser. Hundreds of cars, homes and buildings needed repairs. The financial toll, in today's dollars, would reach into the billions. Scientists were in awe at how the detonations were felt dozens of miles away in Houston and even registered on measuring devices in other states.

The blast was ultimately deemed an accident. One theory held that a carelessly tossed cigarette had set fire to tons of ammonium nitrate fertilizer sitting in the hold of a ship. It was, ironically, fertilizer that the United States was sending to Europe to nourish war-ravaged farms and speed the healing of a decimated continent.

Investigations and court cases would stretch on for years, circling around whether or not more could have been done to warn the good people in Texas City that the bags and bags of fertilizer were not just lifesaving—they were also deadly.

Ammonium nitrate was already well-recognized by then to be both a powerful fertilizer and explosive. Bombmakers used it in World War I, and later, terrorists also sought it out. The compound was used by Timothy McVeigh to blow up a federal building in Oklahoma, and in 2013, there was an explosion at a fertilizer facility in West, Texas, that led to 15 deaths.

Now, as another aching anniversary for the Texas City disaster approaches, I think of the last conversation I had with Trahan. For many long years, he had watched as the stricken city rebuilt bit by bit. Businesses eventually reopened, the freighters came back, and school classes and church services resumed.

But for Trahan and others, the wounds from the Texas City disaster never went entirely away. He and many more had seen too much, endured so much, for the mental and even physical scars to truly vanish.

We sat in his little home, and he talked about how he had first moved to Texas City because he thought it would be a quiet place to raise a family. That he had run for mayor so that anyone from any race or background would be treated the same.

He said that when hell on earth came to his little town, he simply did what he had to do. What he believed most people would do: You race to rescue your neighbors. You pull them from the rubble. You give them balm, hope and resolve.

And then Trahan waved his hand and suggested quietly that he hadn't done anything that merited remembering.

Later, when I spoke at his memorial service, I tried to convey the essence of that final visit with Trahan. How a disaster can reveal both courage and humility—and how you often don't have to look very far to find everyday angels.

Some reside right next door. ■

The Texas City explosion, so powerful it blew two planes out of the sky, killed as many as 500 people in April 1947.

Chefs bring big-time flavor to small-town Graham for the Food Truck Championship of Texas

After parking my car across from a feed store, I make my way up Fourth Street in Graham toward the downtown square. It's a little after noon, and the area is buzzing with activity. Live music rattles through the streets up ahead, and I pass a group of people heading back to their vehicles, toothpicks in hand. "Scrumdiddlyumptious!" one of them says, patting his stomach in satisfaction. I get excited.

Forty-two food trucks are competing today in the Food Truck Championship of Texas, an annual contest that has been held in Graham since 2015. Admission is free for all guests, who can also enjoy live music, an artisan showcase, children's activities and a late-night concert at the Young County Arena after the food.

Up for grabs are numerous awards, bragging rights and the coveted $10,000 grand championship prize for the best food truck—crowned by a panel of expert judges. The stakes are high for competitors who arrive from hundreds of miles away—rigs in tow—in a test to be the best. This year's event is June 4.

For folks like me, choosing what to eat is the real food truck challenge. And we can't lose.

As I approach the competition, my mouth waters and my nostrils are filled with the scent of fried seafood—no doubt coming from the combination of Mac's Cajun Shack, Catch Me If You Can Southern Creole and Blazin Cajun—all positioned near Fourth and Oak streets and serving dishes such as seafood pot pie, gumbo, shrimp and grits, boudin egg rolls, crawfish, and smoked alligator.

In a nearby building, judges Debbie Workman, a chef and restaurateur; Ched Pagtakhan, a chef, culinary arts teacher and food truck owner; and Dante Ramirez, a restaurateur and catering consultant, sample fare from all 42 trucks.

Picked-at plates litter tables across the room, each dish assigned a number to make the entries anonymous.

"I really like that egg roll," Pagtakhan says.

Workman agrees. "The texture was good and flaky. And that pizza, No. 37, was so delicious and unique."

No Small Wonder

One mile around, it's no wonder that Graham calls its business district "America's largest downtown square." About an hour south of Wichita Falls and home to the Young County Courthouse and about 9,000 residents, Graham comes alive each June, when the chefs pull into town.

The smell of beef cooking on a flattop makes my stomach rumble as I approach Big Kat Burgers, but I press on, wanting to see all my options before diving in. A long line for Happy Dogs Corn Dogs tempts me, as does the mega line for Cousins Maine Lobster's fresh lobster rolls.

Maya Justice, who is at the event with friends, recommends Bada Bing Wood Fired Pizza, and several people are buzzing about the fried alligator from Crawldaddys Cajun Kitchen.

"To be able to have pad thai and a Maine lobster roll at the same time here in Graham, America, is incredible," says Grant Ingram, executive director of economic development with the city of Graham. "It's so hard to pinpoint a favorite because the variety of trucks we're able to attract in north central Hill Country is amazing."

I decide the best approach here is sampling smaller items from multiple trucks, and I hop in line at Treviños Craft Smokehouse truck and wait.

"That Dr Pepper pulled pork taco from the Gypsy Kit truck is oh-em-gee," says Jenny French, who's behind me in line at Treviño's. She and her husband, Ken, came to support their neighbors, the Treviños, at the championship and are getting their fill like everyone else. "I wanted that Maine lobster, but the line is so long,” Ken says. “I’ll never know how it tastes.”

I grab a pulled pork taco on a homemade tortilla and head for a table on the courthouse lawn for my first bite of the day. The tender pulled pork and soft tortilla hit the spot on this hot day, and after perusing a few craft booths, I hit the streets again to walk it off and make room for more samples.

The growing line at Addie Cakes & Lily Pies gets my attention, and dessert sounds like just the thing after walking three laps around the square. Toe-tappin’ tunes fill the air, making my wait for a white chocolate Key lime cheesecake more enjoyable. The tart yet sweet treat is perfect for summertime and makes waiting in line feel like a no-brainer.

While visiting with more foodies, I hear lots of chatter about a chicken sandwich on a biscuit. I have to have it, so I make my way to the Bite My Biscuit truck—the 2016 grand champion—for the Nashville hot fried chicken sandwich on a buttermilk biscuit with honey coleslaw and pickles. The $5 dish is the perfect size (and price) for an event like this, and upon trying the spicy, buttery, delicious concoction, I see why everyone is talking about it.

There's the Beef

Full and satisfied, I grab a chair and wait for the awards ceremony.

"To go through 40-plus plates and taste them all and go through each one on uniqueness, presentation and flavors, it's tough," Ramirez announces. "This was difficult for us."

The audience cheers and whoops for each winner, including Bite My Biscuit for that tasty Nashville hot fried chicken biscuit, Yatai Food Kart for their signature ramen dish, Addie Cakes & Lily Pies for their pecan praline cheesecake, Cousins Maine Lobster for the best menu award, and Sakura Southern Seoul for best food truck design.

As the emcee inches closer to announcing the grand champion, the crowd grows quiet. "The 2021 Food Truck Championship grand champion: Rack Attack Barbecue with their dino beef rib and taking home a check for $10,000." The crowd erupts in applause as the Rack Attack team roars with excitement, hugging each other as they claim their prize and a professional wrestling-style belt emblazoned with "2021 Grand Champion."

It was Rack Attack Barbecue's first time competing in the event, so a championship win makes owner Brandon Anderson, who opened the business in March 2018, ecstatic.

"This is the first time I've ever presented food that I've made to real chefs and real food critics, so it's a big deal for us," he says. "I'm really happy."

Anderson knew they'd won something when they were dispatched to the awards ceremony, and as the ceremony progressed, they knew through the process of elimination that grand champion was a possibility—as astonishing

"To be able to have pad thai and a Maine lobster roll at the same time here in Graham, America, is incredible."

as that seemed. "I still can't believe it," he says after the ceremony. "We've worked so hard."

Anderson says he thought the winning dish might relate to Texas, which inspired him to serve a beef rib—what he calls "king in Texas."

"I figured everyone would want to try it, so we smoked them, pulled the meat off the bones and served it on top of smoked mashed potatoes," he says.

It worked. "Their dish was very unique," Pagtakhan says. "The doneness on the smoked beef rib was perfect, the flavor was balanced, and the smoked mashed potatoes was a perfect pairing."

Unfortunately, Rack Attack Barbecue ceased operations a few months after the 2021 Food Truck Championship, so this year's showdown will have a new grand champion in addition to plenty of friendly competition and delectable grub up for grabs.

Gina LeGrand, owner of Addie Cakes & Lily Pies, which won the best dessert category last year, will be ready. "I hope we continue our winning streak—or maybe win overall," she says. "Winning the grand prize with a dessert is challenging, but how incredible would that be?" ■

Lineworkers Light Our Lives

IF YOU WERE ASKED to associate an image or a person with CECA, I bet you would picture a lineworker. Among the most visible employees of the co-op, lineworkers work tirelessly to ensure our community receives uninterrupted power 24/7.

Line work is one of the most dangerous professions in the U.S., requiring detailed tasks while in close contact with high-voltage power lines. Regardless of the time of day, in stormy weather or other challenging conditions, lineworkers must climb 40 feet in the air, often carrying heavy equipment to get the job done.

And yet line work isn't glamorous. The job requires years of specialized training, ongoing education and dedication. Equally important for lineworkers at co-ops—and what sets them apart—is a deeply held sense of service and commitment to the community. That's why co-ops set aside the second Monday in April each year to celebrate and recognize the men and women who work around the clock to keep the lights on.

Lineworkers may be the most visible employees at CECA, but equally critical is the team of highly skilled professionals working behind the scenes.

Engineers provide ongoing expertise and guidance on the operations side of the co-op. Member service representatives are always standing by to take your calls and questions. Our information technology experts continually monitor our system to help safeguard sensitive data. And these are just a few of the folks who work together to ensure we can deliver the service and reliability you expect and deserve. Without them, our lineworkers wouldn't be able to light up our community.

Our dedicated and beloved lineworkers are proud to represent CECA, and they deserve all the appreciation and accolades that come their way on Lineworker Appreciation Day.

On April 11, and any time you see a lineworker, I hope you'll join me in thanking them for their exceptional service. I also hope you'll remember that you have a dedicated team of professionals working at the co-op whose commitment to service runs just as deep. ■

Future Leaders of America To Tour Washington

HARRISON SIDES AND ARYN LESLEY have been selected to represent CECA on the Government-in-Action Youth Tour trip to Washington, D.C.

Sides is a senior at Comanche High School and is the son of Ryan and Kori Sides of De Leon. He is a member of the National Honor Society, an FFA chapter reporter and a Comanche County Texas Farm Bureau Thrive representative and was a class officer for his first two years of high school. He has been selected as the AgTexas Youth of the Month and Most Outstanding Junior Boy. He will graduate from CHS with 52 college hours and a welding certification. Throughout his years at CHS, Sides has been very involved in agricultural extracurricular activities, including showing steers, farm-to-table beef operations, FFA land judging, and the welding and agricultural mechanics team. He has also volunteered in various ways since he was in fourth grade, including for the Christmas skating rink and Angel Tree program, as a Salvation Army bell ringer, and at the Veterans Day and Memorial Day assemblies, which are his favorites.

Lesley is a sophomore at Early High School. She is the daughter of Alan and Wendy Lesley of Blanket. She is a member of Family, Career and Community Leaders of America; a representative on the student council; and a member of various University Interscholastic League academic teams. She has received the Visual Arts Scholastics Award and Academic Excellence in English Award and has placed in UIL Academic Writing and Impromptu Speaking. Through her participation in FCCLA and her church youth group, one thing has become apparent to her: "The generosity of the community has inspired me to want to help and be a part of a cause that is for good."

Congratulations to both students. We are very excited to see what lies ahead for these outstanding young adults and are honored to have them represent CECA on the upcoming Youth Tour trip. ■

Navigating the Path to Greatness

AFTER A TWO-YEAR HIATUS, CECA was able to bring back the CECA Student Leadership Conference. While February is the beginning of the busiest season at school, Kristi Keierleber, family and consumer science teacher at Rising Star Independent School District, brought three of the school's juniors to partake in a resume and interview summit.

The students started the day with an overview of what a resume is and its purpose, and they were encouraged to start thinking about things in their life that could be useful when it's time to build one.

Experts Eric Martinez with CBRE and Makenzie Martinez with Ryder Logistics were brought in to coach the students on what employers look for in resumes. The corporate recruiters, who spend their days fielding resumes and interviewing candidates, gave tips on how to make a resume stand out, how to leverage it to get an interview and how to prepare for interviews. They also gave examples of questions they ask and what they look for when interviewing candidates.

The second half of the day featured Alan Lesley, CECA general manager; Eddie Strube, director of outside operations; and Rachel Ford, human resources specialist and benefit administrator. These three CECA staff members conduct the majority of the interviews held at the co-op.

Ford is the first person candidates typically speak with when the application process begins. She walked the students through her process and gave insight on what she looks for. For example, Ford explained that many job applicants don't realize that an interview can begin the moment you step out of your vehicle. How you present yourself to other employees at the business and how you pass the time while you wait for the interview to start can be factors in the selection process. She advised leaving phones in the car when candidates go in so as not to be tempted to fall into a nervous habit of playing on the phone while waiting. Ford also noted that it's important to be present in the moment and speak to the employees in order to gauge the workplace. She reminded the students that not only are they there to be interviewed, but this also is the prospective new hire's view to start can be factors in the selection process. She advised leaving phones in the car when candidates go in so as not to be tempted to fall into a nervous habit of playing on the phone while waiting. Ford also noted that it's important to be present in the moment and speak to the employees in order to gauge the workplace. She reminded the students that not only are they there to be interviewed, but this also is the prospective new hire's chance to interview the business as well. Lesley discussed the dreaded interview curveball questions. As anyone who's been interviewed knows, there are plenty of questions that can throw you off. While you never want to not have an answer, there are some questions that do require more time to gather your thoughts in answering them. A key piece of advice he gave was to take that time, because it's better to take a moment to collect your thoughts than to rashly say something you may not actually mean.

One of the best pieces of advice given that day was the simplest one of all: Just be yourself. Strube reminded the students that while checking boxes is important, it's also important to like where you work. You're going to be at your best when you're in an environment that aligns with your goals and aspirations. The first step to finding that place is to be yourself in the interview process. That first interview will give you a glimpse into how all subsequent interactions will be with your future employers. The culture of any organization is important, and how you fit into that culture is crucial for not only the employer to know but for you too.

The day ended with activities to practice some of the concepts the students learned throughout the day. They worked on communications skills and discussed things they value and what motivates them.

Because of the two-year hiatus, CECA was excited to get students back in person to work together. Networking is an invaluable asset in the workplace, and these students were able to start making those connections early in their careers.

The time we had to take off from hosting the Student Leadership Conference gave us the chance to reevaluate what we wanted to bring to the table. We have given this conference a whole new purpose, and we hope to share that with even more students in November. ■

Alan Lesley shares the craziest question he was asked in an interview and explains why it was an important question.

One person had to guide a "blindfolded" person through the minefield without touching any of the "mines." After each completed challenge, the next contestant turned around while the others rearranged the next minefield. Each student had to lead and be led through the minefield.

Ashley Bogner guides Monica Sandoval through a very tight squeeze between two of the "mines" to test how well she can take directions.

Callan Alford leads Ashley Bogner through the minefield. The activity forced the students to rely on the communication skills of their partner.

Callan Alford puts his trust in Monica Sandoval to lead him past the barricade of "mines" to reach the finish line.

Limit How Many Appliances Share an Outlet

HOW MANY APPLIANCES do you have plugged into the power strip in your living room?

Take note: Each of those electronics uses a lot of electricity, so if you power up all of them at once, you could overload the electrical circuit. That's because even though each plug goes into a separate socket on the power strip, the power strip itself is plugged into a single outlet.

And if you have plugged one power strip into another to increase the number of appliances you can power from that single outlet, you could be setting yourself up for trouble.

At a minimum, you could trip the circuit connected to that single outlet. Worst case, you could start a fire by overloading it.

If your circuits are overloaded, it's time to call a licensed electrician to upgrade your home's electrical system so it can keep up with the demands new technology places on it.

Here's how to tell if your home's circuits are overloaded, according to Electrical Safety Foundation International:

- ▶ Lights are flickering, blinking or dimming.
- ▶ Electrical receptacles on the walls are warm to the touch or have become discolored.
- ▶ You smell a burning odor coming from receptacles or wall switches.
- ▶ Circuits trip on a regular basis.

Here are some guidelines that can help you avoid overloading your circuits:

- ▶ Do not plug large appliances into extension cords or power strips. They need an outlet all to themselves.
- ▶ Get rid of extension cords. They're meant for temporary use—not permanent. Don't rig your year-round devices, like lamps and TVs, up to extension cords.
- ▶ Notice how many extension cords you use. If it's a lot, that could signal that you don't have enough outlets. An electrician can add more.
- ▶ Don't mistake a power strip for extra juice. All a power strip does is allow you to plug more devices into a single outlet. Doing that can overload an outlet. ■

Energy-Saving Claims: Do They Work?

WITH SO MUCH GUIDANCE out there about how to save electricity, it's sometimes hard to determine what's useful and what isn't. But the answer isn't always a clear-cut yes or no.

Keeping the thermostat set to a constant temperature while you're away saves more energy than setting it higher and lower when you leave and come back, right?

Not true. Keeping your thermostat at a constant temperature while away is a waste of energy. Together, heating and cooling make up almost 50% of annual household energy costs. When you leave for the day, set your thermostat a few degrees higher if using air conditioning. It requires much less energy to resume a comfortable temperature when you get home than it does to keep it at the target temperature all day long.

Is the dishwasher just as efficient as washing dishes by hand?

Yes—in fact, it's usually more efficient. Properly used dishwashers actually use less water while doing a better job, and as a bonus, they can save you more than 200 hours a year. For maximum energy savings, make sure your water heater is set to about 120 degrees and use the most efficient dishwasher settings.

Does turning lights off and on use more energy than just leaving them on?

No, and turning off lights definitely reduces energy use. Turn off LED and incandescent bulbs every time you leave the room. The situation is a little different with CFLs. Turning them off does save energy but can shorten the life of the bulb. Turn CFLs off any time they won't be used for 15 minutes or more.

Does it save energy to close the vents in rooms that aren't being used?

No. Closing air registers forces your furnace or air conditioner to work harder. Keep all your vents and doors open. If your system supplies too much heat or cold to some rooms and too little to other rooms, you should talk to a heating and air conditioning professional about modifying your ductwork.

Will keeping a fan on cool an unoccupied room?

Nope. Fans move air around; they don't cool the air. Having a fan on makes people inside a room feel cooler as air moves across their skin, but the air is not actually changing temperature. Leaving a fan on when you leave your home is simply wasting energy while the room temperature is not cooling off at all.

Does setting the thermostat temperature way lower cool a home faster?

No. No matter what temperature you set your thermostat, your air conditioning system will work equally hard and fast to meet that goal. The only difference achieved by setting the temperature lower is that the system will work for a longer period of time, using more energy.

Do appliances use energy when they're turned off?

Absolutely. Thanks to standby power settings, most appliances constantly use energy to be ready for immediate usage. These "energy vampires" cannot be turned completely off without unplugging the device altogether. The same is true for most phone, battery and other chargers. Leaving them plugged in wastes energy. ■

Scissortail Signals

Flamboyant scissor-tailed flycatchers signal spring's arrival and our environs' health

BY BRENDA KISSKO • ILLUSTRATION BY LAURINDO FELICIANO

GROWING UP ON a West Texas ranch, my sister and I kept our eyes peeled for the first signs of spring as we anticipated summer, a most magical time when there was no school and endless days filled with swimming in tanks, rolling in cottonseed and helping dad feed the livestock. The scissor-tailed flycatcher was always our sign that spring had arrived.

The scissortail, also known as the Texas bird of paradise, is easy to identify by its long, forked tail and the radiant salmon color under its white-edged black wings. They inhabit the south-central U.S., including nearly all of Texas, which is home to around 72% of the entire scissortail population during breeding season, March to August. The birds favor savanna habitats—warm, flat grasslands with scattered trees—and are often seen on utility poles and fences.

Scissortails are showoffs. In general, males have longer tails and more intense plumage colors. A long tail is an indicator of health, and males like to show it off with aerial demonstrations like backward somersaults.

That iconic tail makes the birds easy to spot for novice birders like Caleb Helsel, a student at Hill Country Middle School in Austin and a founding member of the Austin Avocets, a group of young birders. One summer he kept a tally of every scissortail he saw. The marks he made in his notebook added up to more than 200.

"There's so many cool birds out there, and there's always more to learn about them," Helsel says.

"Pay attention to the birds. It's a good way to spend your time."

Helsel enjoys birding so much that he has learned to bird by ear, meaning he can identify a bird just by the sounds it makes, and he maintains a checklist of the birds he's seen on eBird, an online platform managed by the Cornell Lab of Ornithology that allows people to report bird sightings and share photos and recordings. Helsel has many birding mentors, including the internationally renowned Texas birder Victor Emanuel.

Emanuel founded Victor Emanuel Nature Tours in 1976, leading birding and nature tours across the globe. On his 70th birthday, a flock of around 70 scissortails sang to him at Hornsby Bend Bird Observatory in Austin. He remembers it as one of his most memorable interactions with the species.

"The scissortail is one of the most beautiful and striking birds in the world," Emanuel says. "By studying birds and nature, you get connected to the world in a way that you aren't ... with other hobbies. Sharing something in nature is a very powerful experience."

During breeding season, most scissortails return to the same area they migrated to the previous year. No wonder seeing one perched on the telephone wire in front of our house every summer was like seeing an old friend.

Females lay up to three nests each breeding season, and each nest typically has three to five eggs, white with reddish-brown spots, that take two weeks to hatch. It takes at least a year for those long tail feathers of up to 12 inches to come in.

The birds, which eat flying insects like beetles, grasshoppers and crickets, are important to ecosystems. "Scissortails are great indicators of the ecosystem's health, and as those populations decline, the health of the land is declining, and that's going to start affecting us," says Jim Giocomo of the American Bird Conservancy.

There are 4 million fewer scissortails now than there were in 1966—a population loss of about 31%—according to data compiled by the U.S. Geological Survey. Though the species is not listed as endangered, conservation advocacy network Partners in Flight estimates a further 50% of the population could be lost in the next 37 years if landowners don't make changes.

The list of threats to the scissortail includes pesticides and loss of native grasslands, says Cliff Shackelford, state ornithologist for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and a member of Deep East Texas Electric Cooperative.

"Texans don't hear the sweet whistle of the bobwhite across much of Texas anymore due to the drastic change to our grasslands and how we treat those grasslands" Shackelford says. "Hopefully the scissortail won't be the next to disappear." ■

Send Her Over The Rainbow

700-year old legendary art form for the price of your dreams.

Now I know how that little farm girl from Kansas felt when she went over the rainbow and awoke in a land of spectacular color. Look what I found in the land of ahhs!

Approaching Burano Island off of northern Venice was like being swept away in a dream. Known for its brightly-painted fisherman houses that line the canals, I was greeted with every color of the rainbow. Since before the Venetian Republic, Burano was home to fishermen and legend says that the houses were painted in bright hues so they could see their way home when fog blanketed the lagoon.

Inspiration struck. I wanted to capture this historical beauty in the centuries old art form of Murano. Still regarded as being the finest form craftsmanship in the world, Murano has evolved into modern day fashion statements.

So I hopped on a vaporetto for a forty minute ride to Venice and sought out the impeccable talents of one of Venice's finest Murano artisans. They've captured the vibrant colors of the iconic fisherman houses in the perfect hand-formed beads of The Murano Rainbow Necklace. To own a piece of authentic Murano is to own a piece of fine art steeped in history. Each and every piece is a one-of-a-kind masterpiece.

I want to make it easy for you to send her over the rainbow. That's why for a limited time you can treat her to

The Murano Rainbow Necklace for only $39. And, to help you double down on romance, I'll throw in the matching bracelet absolutely FREE! As one of the largest importers of handcrafted Italian jewelry, we have a way of making dreams that you dare to dream come true.

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back. Enjoy the Murano Rainbow Necklace for 30 days. If it doesn't pass with flying colors, send it back for a full refund of the item price. You can even keep the bracelet for your trouble.

Limited Reserves. You could easily pay $300 or more for a Murano glass bead necklace, but at $39 PLUS a FREE bracelet, these authentic handcrafted pieces won't last. For a remarkable deal, there's no place like Raffinato.

How to Win at Love

A classic tennis bracelet serves up over 10 carats of sparkle for a guaranteed win

It was the jewelry piece that made the world stop and take notice. In the middle of a long volley during the big American tennis tournament, the chic blonde athlete had to stop play because her delicate diamond bracelet had broken and she had to find it. The tennis star recovered her beloved bracelet, but the world would never be the same.

From that moment on, the tennis bracelet has been on the lips and on the wrists of women in the know. Once called eternity bracelets, these bands of diamonds were known from then on as tennis bracelets, and remain the hot ticket item with jewelers.

THRILLED DIAMONDAURA® CUSTOMERS

We've captured this timeless classic with over 10 total carats of DiamondAura®, our signature diamond alternative stone. This sparkling marvel rivals even the finest diamonds (D Flawless) with its transparent color and clarity, and both are so hard they can cut glass. Don't believe me? The book "Jewelry and Gems – The Buying Guide," praised the technique used in our diamond alternative DiamondAura®: "The best diamond simulation to date, and even some jewelers have mistaken these stones for mined diamonds," it raved. For comparison, we found a similarly designed 10 carat tennis bracelet with D Flawless diamonds from another company that costs $57,000!

Want to look like a million bucks without stressing over losing or damaging something that cost you a fortune? The Love Wins Tennis Bracelet is a simple strand of glittering gems in precious sterling that epitomizes elegance.

Two-Fisted Law and Order

Judge Roy Bean made the rules and found fame in his remote corner of West Texas

BY W.F. STRONG

IN THE BIG BEND TOWN of Langtry, Judge Roy Bean opened a saloon on the railroad right-of-way. It was 1882, and even though he was squatting, the railroad allowed him to stay. Bean named his bar the Jersey Lilly after actress Lillie Langtry.

When trains stopped for water, the passengers could order a drink at the Jersey Lilly. But Bean never had change, so if a customer paid a dollar for a 25-cent beer, he wouldn't get the other 75 cents. If he complained, Bean fined him 75 cents for disturbing the peace.

Bean had proclaimed himself the "law west of the Pecos" and preferred his own interpretation of the law. When he received new state statutes every two years, he burned them. Once he sentenced a young man to hang but left the jail unlocked the night before the hanging so the condemned could escape.

In Bean's early years, he lived in San Antonio, where he found success with a saloon but sold the business to pursue opportunities in the railroad camps of West Texas. He gained notoriety when he took the law into his own hands.

When Bean held court in the Jersey Lilly, he would assemble a jury and swear the members in. The case would be presented, the verdict determined and sentencing pronounced quickly. Often the sentence for misdemeanors was a round of drinks for the jury. He was very patriotic about Texas, too. He often preceded sentencing with words like: "You have offended the great state of Texas by committing this crime on her sacred soil."

One of his most famous cases had to do with a man who fell to his death off a bridge in Langtry. Bean found $40 and a pistol on the man's body and fined him $40 for carrying a concealed weapon. That was enough to get him buried.

Bean rose to international prominence when he organized a world heavyweight boxing championship between Bob Fitzsimmons and Peter Maher in 1896. Prizefighting was then illegal in Texas.

At first, the fight looked like it might be held on the sly in El Paso, but the governor sent 25 Texas Rangers over there to make sure it didn't happen. Then it seemed like it might be held in Juarez, but the governor of Chihuahua sent troops to prevent a fight there. Finally Bean sent a telegram to the promoter saying they could have it in Langtry—actually, right across the river on a Rio Grande sandbar, miles from any authority that would stop it.

So a menagerie of unlikely associates, boxers, gamblers, Texas Rangers, high rollers and spectators of all stripes boarded a train bound for parts unknown. The destination was kept a secret. Bean met them at his railside saloon, sold them beer at the exorbitant price of a dollar apiece and then escorted them across a pontoon bridge to the Mexican side of the river.

Fitzsimmons knocked out Maher after 95 seconds, so the fight was over before the spectators could settle in. But the big winner—as ever—was Bean. He became known worldwide as the man who made the fight possible. ■

Brunch

Crowd-pleasing additions for this much-anticipated meal

BY MEGAN MYERS, FOOD EDITOR

Hosting brunch is one of my favorite things to do for friends. Whether for a group of four or 30, embracing the sweet and savory sides of brunch always gets my creativity in the kitchen going. This month I've taken a spin on the classic bagel breakfast and turned it into a scrumptious smoked salmon turnover. Pre-made puff pastry keeps it incredibly easy so you can put the dish together in a snap.

Smoked Salmon Turnovers

1 sheet prepared puff pastry, thawed if frozen
3 ounces smoked salmon
4 ounces cream cheese, softened
2 tablespoons chopped fresh chives
1 egg
1 tablespoon water
1 tablespoon everything bagel seasoning

COOK'S TIP Everything bagel seasoning can be found in most grocery stores, or make your own blend with sesame seeds, poppy seeds, salt, dried minced garlic and dried onion flakes.

1. Preheat oven to 425 degrees and line a baking sheet with parchment. Place puff pastry on a lightly floured surface and gently roll out to a rectangle, approximately 9 by 14 inches.
2. Roughly chop salmon and place in a bowl. Add cream cheese and chives and stir until evenly mixed, breaking up the salmon more as you stir.
3. Cut the puff pastry into 8 equal pieces. Add about 2 tablespoons filling to each piece, then fold pastry over to form a triangle. Press edges to seal and crimp with the tines of a fork. Repeat with remaining pastry and filling. Place filled turnovers on prepared baking sheet.
4. In a small bowl, whisk together egg and water, then brush over the tops of the turnovers. Sprinkle bagel seasoning evenly over the turnovers. Bake 15–18 minutes, until puffed and golden brown. Let cool slightly before serving.

- 2 cups whole-wheat flour
- 2–2½ cups all-purpose flour, plus more as needed, divided use
- 2 eggs
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup (1 stick) butter, softened and cut into chunks
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt
- 1–2 cups prepared cream cheese frosting

FILLING

- 6 tablespoons ($\frac{3}{4}$ stick) butter, softened
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons ground cinnamon

1. ROLLS In a large bowl or the bowl of a stand mixer, combine warmed milk, yeast and sugar. Let rest 5 minutes, then gradually mix in wheat flour, 2 cups all-purpose flour, eggs (one at a time) and butter. If using a stand mixer, start speed at low and then turn to medium, mixing until a soft dough is formed. Add additional flour as needed to prevent sticking. Sprinkle in salt and

BARBARA REISS
PEDERNALES EC

Perfect for using up leftover bread, this strata has all the flavors of a classic BLT sandwich. Make sure to chill it for at least an hour, or overnight, to ensure the bread soaks up the custard.

SERVES 6

- 6 ounces thick-cut bacon, cut into small pieces
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup chopped onion
- 1 cup halved cherry tomatoes
- 2 cups baby spinach or arugula
- 6 ounces day-old bread, such as sourdough or challah, cut into cubes
- 6 eggs
- $\frac{3}{4}$ cup milk
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon pepper
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup packed shredded Gruyère or white cheddar

- 1. Grease a 2-quart baking dish and set aside.
- 2. In a large skillet over medium heat, cook bacon until crisp. Drain bacon on a paper towel-lined plate and pour off all but 1 tablespoon of fat.
- 3. Sauté onions in the same skillet over medium heat until they begin to soften and become translucent, 3–5 minutes. Add halved tomatoes and increase heat to medium-high. Cook, scraping up any browned bits in the pan, until onions have started to caramelize and tomatoes have softened. Stir in the spinach until wilted, then remove the pan from heat. Stir the bacon into the onion mixture.
- 4. Add half the bread cubes to prepared baking dish, then top with half of the onion mixture. Repeat with remaining bread and onion mixture.
- 5. In a large bowl, whisk together eggs, milk, salt and pepper, then pour evenly into the baking dish. Sprinkle cheese over the top, then cover with foil and refrigerate at least 1 hour and up to overnight.
- 6. When ready to bake, remove strata from the refrigerator and preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Bake uncovered 40–45 minutes, until lightly browned on top.

mix a few minutes more. Gently knead dough into a ball and place in a large greased bowl. Cover and let rise 1–2 hours or until doubled in size.

2. Once dough has risen, place it on a lightly floured surface. Roll dough into a 12-by-18-inch rectangle.

3. FILLING Spread softened butter over the surface of the dough. In a small bowl, combine sugar and cinnamon, then sprinkle over the dough evenly.

4. Roll up dough on the long end, then cut into 12 rolls. Lightly grease a 9-by-13-inch baking dish and place rolls cut-side up in the pan. Sprinkle any excess filling over rolls, then cover dish tightly and chill overnight.

5. When ready to bake, remove rolls and let rise 1–2 hours or until puffy. Preheat oven to 375 degrees and bake rolls 20–25 minutes. Let cool slightly and then top with prepared frosting.

Tex-Mex Bacon and Egg Squares

MARILYN BURGESS
TRINITY VALLEY EC

Easy to make and crowd-pleasers, these squares are ideal for those who love the combination of chiles and cheese. Serve as is or with guacamole, sour cream or additional hot sauce.

2 cans (10 ounces) whole green chiles, drained
8 ounces grated sharp cheddar cheese

6 slices thick-cut bacon, cooked and cut into bite-size pieces
6 eggs
Dash of hot sauce
Salt and pepper

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly coat an 8-by-8-inch baking dish with cooking spray. Arrange chiles evenly in the dish, then sprinkle on cheese and bacon.

2. In a bowl, beat together eggs, hot sauce, and salt and pepper, then pour evenly into the dish. Bake until eggs are firm and cheese has melted, 25–30 minutes. Cool 5 minutes, then cut into squares to serve.

COURTESY CHET GARNER

Swinging Through Time

The Regency Bridge is the state's last drivable suspension bridge

BY CHET GARNER

I COULD FEEL MY ENTIRE vehicle swaying as I cruised, ever so carefully, across the last drivable suspension bridge in Texas. I felt like a squirrel on a power line, but instead of being 30 feet above the ground, I was 75 feet above the Colorado River. To make matters even more tense, I could hear the wooden boards flexing and creaking beneath my tires.

I was deep in the northern Hill Country for this adventure of driving across the Regency Bridge, part road and part roller coaster. The bridge is truly the last of its kind and may only still exist because it connects two quiet gravel roads with very little traffic.

The Regency Bridge was built in 1939 to link the rural communities of San Saba and Mills counties and spans more than 400 feet from bank to bank. The drivable surface consists of planks suspended by metal cables, earning it the nickname Swinging Bridge.

Yes, it really swings. And in its 83 years of existence, it's seen everything from buggies to cattle drives to electric cars.

I was about halfway across when I realized the bridge is so narrow that I could only see the road in front of me and the metal cables out each of my side windows. It left me with a really beautiful view of the expansive Colorado River basin marked by high limestone bluffs. I had to constantly remind myself to keep my eyes on the road or else my trip was going to meet a very abrupt end.

Those who might be nervous to cross should know that the Texas Department of Transportation has done multiple inspections and overhauls—the most recent in 2021. I survived my trip and had so much fun, I immediately turned around and did it all over again. ■

No Hedging

Waging a battle—but losing the war—against vengeful hedge parsley

BY SHERYL SMITH-RODGERS
ILLUSTRATION BY ANDREA COBB

I NEVER SUSPECTED a thing. As I pulled and yanked, I had no clue that the weeds I sought to eliminate planned a revenge I'd never forget.

"You better stop," my husband warned as I worked that spring evening in what we call the meadow, our adjoining lot turned nature preserve. "You're going to overdo it."

"I'll be fine," I retorted, bending down to pull another and another and another.

James rolled his eyes and left me knee-high in firewheel, prairie verbena, Engelmann's daisies, Texas stars and—horror!—common hedge parsley. The introduced species did not belong among our native beauties. So I was determined to get rid of them.

Honeybees flitted among the wildflowers as I used my right arm to tug out another slim stem of hedge parsley. Their tiny flowers and fernlike leaves reminded me of their carrot cousin, Queen Anne's lace. Their bright white umbels also made them easy to target in my execution march across the meadow.

Occasionally I surveyed my progress, which was not impressive. I sighed. Hundreds more of the intruders swayed in the breeze, taunting my efforts. I knew it would take hours more to pull them all. But I kept going.

At least I'm making a dent, I convinced myself. There won't be as many next year.

But I knew the truth. Next year, beaucoup of their sticky seeds (that latch onto fur and socks) would germinate by the thousands. No matter what, hedge parsleys would flourish as they always have. The only difference, I would soon learn, was I'd never declare war against them again.

Just a few days later, on the road for a trip, my right shoulder began to ache. Gingerly, I rotated my upper arm and brushed off the pain. Yeah, it'd go away. I'd be OK.

But I wasn't. The week after we got home, James drove me to our medical clinic.

"I did the same thing," said the nurse practitioner as she checked my shoulder and arm. "I scrubbed floors by hand one afternoon. Then I stirred hot chocolate at the football stadium's concession stand. Took six months for my shoulder to heal."

"Six months," I echoed.

"Sure did," she said. "Don't worry." She patted my shoulder. "You'll get better. Just give it some time."

I did. Six months later, though, my right shoulder still reminded me of how I sinned in the meadow. Would it ever truly heal?

In the meantime, I dreaded the next spring. I could already envision the hedge parsleys waving their leaves in victory, sense their roots snaking deep into the soil.

Somehow I had to ignore them. Because, trust me, revenge of the hedge parsleys is for real. Just ask me and my right shoulder. ■
