National Tooth Fairy Day

The tooth fairy forks over an average of $4.70 per visit in the U.S., a recent poll shows. That's a far cry from the nickel recommended more than a century ago.

The Chicago Tribune carried the first published mention of the tooth fairy—in 1908. Writer Lillian Brown advised that parents might have an easier time persuading children to have loose teeth pulled if a "tooth fairy" left a small gift of 5 cents under youngsters' pillows for each tooth lost.

SCORE ONE FOR THE CO-OP

When Hereford Sports & Wellness took delivery of two digital scoreboards for its soccer field in the Panhandle town, the non-profit community center realized it didn't have the means to install them.

Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative did. The co-op sent a bucket truck outfitted with an auger and a crew of linemen, who drilled a half-dozen 6-foot-deep holes to securely mount the new displays.

Cool Coat

ENGINEERS HAVE CREATED the whitest paint ever—a paint so white that building surfaces coated in it are 8 degrees cooler than the air on a sunny day. The innovation could reduce air conditioning demands and mitigate the effects of climate change, Vice reports.

The new paint, developed by a team at Purdue University, reflects 98.1% of sunlight. Researchers used barium sulfate, a powder that's reflective across all wavelengths of sunlight, to pigment the new paint—unlike most white paints, which tend to use titanium dioxide as pigment.

Opportunities abound for Texans to augment impactful research

Victoria resident and shrimp boat captain Diane Wilson often walks along the shoreline. She keeps a sharp eye out, not for seashells but for small pellets of plastic. Called nurdles, these lentil-sized bits are raw material used for manufacturing plastics. She has found as many as 21,000 nurdles at one time.

“They’re like little peas, or lentils, with different shapes,” says Wilson, who reports her finds to Nurdle Patrol at the University of Texas Marine Science Institute in Port Aransas. This work makes her a citizen scientist—one of thousands of people who lend their eyes, ears, hands and time to professional scientists conducting all kinds of research around the world.

“To date, we’ve had more than 2,000 volunteers remove more than 1.5 million nurdles from beaches spanning from Brazil to Canada,” says Jace Tunnell, director of the Mission-Aransas National Estuarine Research Reserve at the institute, which runs Nurdle Patrol. After a spill left nurdles all over coastlines around Corpus Christi in September 2018, Tunnell started a Facebook group for people to report the pellets. Within a few weeks, posts had poured in from every U.S. state along the Gulf of Mexico; a university in Veracruz, Mexico; and a nonprofit on the Yucatán Peninsula. That led him to create the full-blown citizen science project.

“If this was just a university project, three or four of us going out and trying to figure out where nurdles are coming from, we would never be able to do it,” Tunnell says. “It is really the citizen scientists who are making this project a success.”

Early Nurdle Patrol volunteers reported high concentrations of pellets in bay systems along the Texas coast, where many plastic manufacturers are located. A map created from these reports uses warmer colors to depict higher concentrations of pellets. “Texas and Louisiana are purple, indicating more than 1,000 pellets found in 10 minutes,” Tunnell says, adding that the project hopes to stop plastic from entering the environment and to give volunteers the opportunity to be involved in impactful work.

“You just collect a sample and estimate the count from what you can pick up in 10 minutes,” Wilson explains. “You don’t remove all the pellets or you’d go nuts. It’s very easy and is a way to protect your own health as well as the bays and wildlife.”

Nurdle Patrol, like most citizen science projects, requires no special skill or knowledge. Some citizen science even can be done sitting on your couch with a computer or smartphone. The FISHstory project asks people to identify and count fish in historical fishing photos, helping to estimate what kinds of and how many fish people caught in the South Atlantic during the 1940s through the 1970s. That information supports current management of those waters. Other couch-bound projects include transcribing historical documents, playing video games to show how people solve problems and completing a survey about your dog.

Other tasks can be done just outside your door. For Globe at Night, a worldwide map of artificial light pollution, simply go outside after dark, use a night sky phone app to find a designated constellation and then use a star chart to identify the faintest star you can see nearby.

Still other projects provide the perfect excuse to go exploring. The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's dozen Texas Nature Trackers projects ask people to report sightings anywhere in Texas of specific plants and animals using the iNaturalist app. The information helps the department understand the distribution and seasonality of species and how they change over time.

"Every county in Texas has one assigned wildlife biologist, and it's impossible for one individual in any given county to keep track of all the flora and fauna," says the program's Craig Hensley. "Through citizen science, we gain information that leads to better conservation decisions." The projects focus on species with the greatest conservation need, such as the Texas horned lizard, whooping cranes, monarch butterflies and milkweed, and freshwater mussels, which are threatened by invasive species.

Lee County resident and Bluebonnet Electric Cooperative member Linda Jo Conn, a Texas master naturalist, participates in Nature Trackers projects on milkweed and mammals. "I call myself an iNaturalist addict," Conn says. "I learn a lot. That's one of the reasons I'm involved. I go places just to see what I can find and am known to stop on highways. My friends know that if I'm not waving my arms, I'm OK."

Elaine Cowley, a Guadalupe Valley EC member who lives in Luling, helps Nature Trackers refine data on mammals in Texas, specifically the swamp rabbit. "I was already using iNaturalist for some other projects, so I said yes to this curation project," she says. "There is so much data out there, but unless it is in the right category, TPWD can't use it.

"There are so many ways to get involved in citizen science that don't take a lot of time," she adds. "It's enjoyable at the same time. You're outside, looking for things. It's an opportunity to understand what's out there and what we need to do to protect it or what we're already doing but maybe didn't realize."

Weather watchers can turn their interest into citizen science as well. For six years Chris Keating of Mason has collected data for the Community Collaborative Rain, Hail and Snow Network, known as CoCoRaHS. At the most basic level, volunteers report the amount of rain in their gauges daily. Keating also submits a weekly report summarizing conditions in his Hill Country town, the number of thunderclaps when there is a storm and extreme weather details when something unusual happens, such as hail.

"I have read scientific papers that refer to CoCoRaHS, so it is a productive project, with the data put to scientific use," Keating says. "You can do it on a phone app or a computer. It's designed for the layperson. You just have to be able to read a rain gauge."

A related project, the Global Learning and Observations

'You're outside, looking for things. It's an opportunity to understand what's out there and what we need to do to protect it or what we're already doing but maybe didn't realize.'

photographers and eventually want to know what they're taking pictures of," Tjelmeland says. "Others are more like me and want to know what's in their backyard or favorite natural area. You can just grab a camera and start snapping pictures, even without knowing a lot initially."

Insects can seem overwhelming in terms of sheer numbers of species and the difficulty of identifying them. Tjelmeland advises starting with things you are interested in, perhaps moths or grasshoppers, and expanding from there. On the plus side, you do not have to go far to find insects.

Volunteers at the preserve have tallied almost 2,000 species of plants and animals, including insects. "Almost anywhere you go, biodiversity is weighted toward those smaller things that are often overlooked but really important in terms of ecology," he says.

Citizen scientists contribute information needed by scientists and project managers, providing much more than those professionals could obtain on their own. These contributions are equally if not more important in rural communities, Hensley says, especially when information is collected on private land. He notes that iNaturalist allows users to protect the location of their reports, sharing it only with the project and not the public.

"The more we know, the better we can be at managing things," Hensley says. "An animal may be more common than we know it to be because there is good habitat on private land holdings but no one is sharing the information. As a result, we may be making decisions without all the facts. Citizen science is vital to conservation efforts going forward." ■ to Benefit the Environment Observer Program, asks citizen scientists to submit photographs of cloud cover.

People who live near or visit the Texas coast can use the iSeaTurtle app to report sightings of these endangered reptiles. The data helps scientists at Texas A&M University map and understand their distribution.

At the Nature Conservancy's Texas City Prairie Preserve, outside Houston, volunteers can photograph and report plants and animals observed on its 2,300 acres using iNaturalist. Aaron Tjelmeland, preserve manager, has tallied almost 600 species of moths there. The project grew from his participation in the 2019 City Nature Challenge, an annual international event that mobilizes citizen scientists to record urban biodiversity on iNaturalist.

"That interested me in the depth and breadth of biodiversity here at the preserve, things other than the more obvious birds and reptiles," Tjelmeland says. "From moths, it grew into the broader insect community—anything I could take a picture of, basically."

People come into the project in different ways. "Some are

POWER OF OUR PEOPLE

Easing Life's Baggage

Flush with bags, a college student finds new ways to support foster youths through difficult transitions

Hunter Beaton has delivered some 45,000 bags since he started his project in 2016.

Serenity Packs

With bags supplied by Hunter Beaton and donations from Houston County businesses, Allen created packs of snacks, activities and other items designed to comfort children caught up in police incidents—especially in rural areas, where family members or Child Protective Services may be miles away.

“It could be 30, 40 minutes, and they don’t know what’s going on; there’s lights flashing, and the officer has to take care of an accident scene or an arrest,” said Allen, who is president of the Texas Council of Child Welfare Boards, in which capacity he met Beaton in 2017, and a member of Houston County EC.

To equip police vehicles with bags for children, Allen worked with nearby departments, who were enthusiastic about the A Serenity Activity Packs, or ASAP bags, as he called them. Beaton was too, and his bags, sourced from Boerne-based Flying Circle Gear, were a perfect match.

“It seems odd maybe to have a bag full of toys and trinkets in a patrol car, but from what I’ve heard, the police officers love it,” Beaton said. “It’s something that can build a little bit of trust.”

Since January, ASAP bags have spread from Houston County to more than 30 police agencies in Texas—a total of 2,500 bags.

“It just kind of took off,” Allen said. “One county after the next—about every week or two we’ll hear about a new county implementing it.”

Adopt a Senior

Allie Grace Graves knows how life can be different for foster children because she was one before she was adopted as a 6-year-old.

“I had to grow up a lot faster than the average child,” said the native of Lone Star, in northeast Texas. “I was doing the dishes, getting on the church bus, roaming around town by myself before I was 4 years old.”

That was on Graves’ mind in 2020 as she was set to graduate from high school. She had her family to celebrate with but knew that more than 500 graduating high school students still in foster care in Texas would not.

She wanted to help and reached out to someone she knew could bring her idea to life: Hunter Beaton.

“Most high school students have someone to celebrate their graduation with,” Graves said. “We want that to be the case for every foster youth in Texas.”

Graves and Beaton teamed up to send duffel bags full of goodies, including personalized letters, to each graduate still in foster care. Donors “adopt” a senior through the program.

About 1,200 foster youths in Texas turn 18 each year without being reunited with their birth family or adopted. More than a quarter of them exit the system without a high school diploma or stable housing, and nearly half are unemployed, according to Texas CASA.

“When I first started, I was so focused on the younger side of

The police cruiser barely registered with Tim Allen when it moved past the porch where he was meeting with a child in the foster care system.

But the 11-year-old girl from rural Houston County noticed. “She just started shaking,” said Allen, a volunteer for Court Appointed Special Advocates, which assists children in the foster care system. “And I realized that the only context she’s ever had for a police officer was when her mother was pulled over with her in the car, for a drug violation.”

Stirred by the young girl’s response, Allen wanted to do something to help other children in her position, who may be entering the foster care system after a traumatic police encounter.

He knew who could bring his idea to life.

Hunter Beaton started Day 1 Bags in 2016, after his own foster siblings arrived at the Beaton house in Boerne with their belongings in trash bags. “How awful is that?” Beaton told Texas Co-op Power in July 2018. “No kid deserves this.”

In the five years since, what started as an Eagle Scout project with $10,000 in community donations for 15-year-old Beaton has become a full-fledged independent nonprofit that has delivered some 45,000 locally made duffel bags to children in foster care in 22 states. The premise is simple: Give those kids a reason to smile and something to call their own. Beaton, 20, now serves as CEO of the organization while he studies at the University of Texas at Austin, even spending his spring break meeting with police agencies and donors, looking over the finances, and crafting social media strategy.

“We are continuing to do our main mission: providing backpacks and luggage for foster children and at-risk youth who are moving from home to home,” Beaton said. “So many youth have been moved around so much—so to have something they can keep, that is really nice and to put any belongings inside really means so much to them.”

But now Day 1 Bags is expanding its reach, partnering with advocates like Allen to help more children and shine a light on lesser-known issues faced by youths in the foster system.

“I never envisioned it taking off like it did,” said Paula Beaton, Hunter’s mom and a member of Bandera Electric Cooperative. “And it’s overwhelming at times. I mean, we’ll have boxes arrive, and my husband’s like, ‘Ugh, another set of boxes’—and we never intended for our house to be a warehouse.

“But honestly, every quarter I ask Hunter, ‘Do you want to keep doing this?’ And he says, ‘Absolutely.’” the board. The Beatons' Hill Country neighbors also have kept up their support.

"People think it's the corporate donors who do all the heavy lifting, but it's really all the $10, $20, $50 donations here and there that really build it up," Beaton said. "People are just so generous."

He said he plans to continue his nonprofit work after college, where he's studying communications and leadership. And while he accomplished more than most on spring break this year, Beaton still made time for the former foster children in his life—his own siblings, who started it all.

They played board games, basketball and tennis. "It's fun to come back home and be around kids," he said. "They aren't so serious and make you laugh a lot." ■ things, toddlers and children, that I completely overlooked high school," Beaton said. "So now we're doing our best to help."

Beaton expanded the program this year, outfitting all 562 graduates in the class of 2021 with a vital documents bag, gift cards, reusable water bottles and other items.

"Just so they have something to celebrate their graduation with," he said.

Riding to the Challenge

A few years ago, when Beaton was preparing to get his driver's license, he didn't want to drive a vehicle with an automatic transmission. That would be too easy.

"I wanted to test in a stick shift," he said. "So I practiced a lot, burned out my dad's clutch but ended up being able to pass the driver's test. I like big challenges like that."

That same ethic is visible in Beaton's commitment to foster children. Being named the Texas Veterans of Foreign Wars Scout of the Year and winning a Congressional Gold Medal for his work was just the start.

"There's always going to be a need," Beaton said. "I want to continue to grow and do new things and make Day 1 Bags incredibly influential for these youth."

It's still a family effort behind him with Paula (his "top pusher and supporter," he said) as treasurer; his sister Hailey as social media guru; and his dad, Kevin, serving on

The Biggest Event In Silver Dollar History!

The American Silver Eagle has been the most popular silver coin on the planet since its introduction in 1986. Its beautiful, iconic design inspires collectors, and investors love it because it's struck in one full ounce of 99.9% fine silver, and guaranteed for weight and fineness by the U.S. Government. Now in 2021, for the first time ever, the coin's design is changing.

The Most Important Coins in the Modern Era

When President Ronald Reagan signed the Liberty Coin Act into law, he didn't know American Eagles would have the impact they've had, year after year. The coins were so popular that between 1986 and 2020, over 535 million were struck. That's more than HALF A BILLION coins, easily making Silver Eagles the most bought coins in the world. Hugely popular now, Silver Eagles may soon become even more popular!

Collectors Crave Firsts

Collectors covet coins with Key Dates. Key Dates mark significance in a coin's history...firsts, lasts, lowest mintage, new finishes and new designs. Now, for the first time in over three-and-a-half decades, the Silver Eagle is getting a new design, leading to a historic "first" unlike anything we've seen. The iconic Heraldic Eagle reverse is being replaced by a beautiful new "Eagle Landing" design. This is arguably a bigger deal than even the actual introduction of the coin because there's so much more interest now than in 1986, with investors and collectors!

If You Knew Then What You Know Now...

If you'd had a crystal ball in 1986, you undoubtedly would have grabbed every Silver Eagle you could get. Those coins in uncirculated condition continue to be sought-after. Now you're getting another chance to land a big Silver Eagle first, a Key Date. Additionally, since these newly designed Silver Eagles are only being released during the second half of 2021, it's quite possible this will be one of the lowest mintages we've seen. That's significant because it could make 2021 a DOUBLE Key Date, with both a new design and a low mintage. Demand for these coins is already sky-high, but if that happens, watch out! No one can predict the future value of silver, but many Americans are rushing to stock up, for themselves, and their loved ones.

Growing Up Co-op

I LOVE THE FEELING of being able to walk into my favorite locally owned shop, restaurant or store knowing that its profit, product and labor can have positive impacts on my community. The spirit of Main Street is embodied in these local businesses, just as it is in CECA.

Electric co-ops are as local and community centered as they come. Founded as a means for bringing electricity to communities that didn't interest profit-seeking investor-owned utilities, electric co-ops have been a cornerstone of community and economic development in rural America and beyond for decades.

That feeling I get when I frequent local businesses in our community is the same feeling I get when I walk into work at the co-op every day. It's a feeling of pride. I'm proud to be part of an organization that serves the community where we live instead of a group of shareholders who may never set foot in our service territory.

Living on co-op lines is more than just knowing there are people out there working to bring you safe, reliable and affordable electric service. Living on co-op lines is an investment in our community and its members.

You see, CECA is a not-for-profit business. When we make more money than we need to keep the lights on safely, affordably and reliably, we return it to our members (that's you!) in the form of capital credits. This means that after all co-op expenses are paid, any additional money we earn goes back into our community, instead of into a shareholder's pocket—which is pretty great.

And because we are owned by you, our members, we have a vested interest in making sure our community prospers. We do this by investing in economic development and community service projects and programs.

I hope that you view CECA not just as your electric utility provider but as a local business that brings pride and prosperity to our community. If you're interested in learning about how we keep the lights on and more, please stop by the co-op or give us a call. We love being a part of this community, and we hope you feel the same way. ■

Traditions Sweet as Peaches

*SERGII KUCHUGURNYISH/ISTOCK.COM

BY MAEGAN WELLS

WE ALL KNOW TEXAS SUMMER DAYS are long and hot. When I was a child, my great-grandmother, Ruth Caffey, always had fresh fruit in her home in Sidney, which meant fresh desserts anytime you visited—or maybe that was just a special treat for her great-granddaughter. Regardless, it was always a sweet treat to spend time with her. And one very special treat that sticks out was her homemade, fresh peach ice cream.

I can still remember its perfect amount of peaches paired with just the right amount of cream. It's a taste one can't forget!

When I researched the most popular Texas summer treats, I quickly learned that what I thought was a hidden gem is actually loved statewide. I reached out to my dad for a recipe that I hadn't seen since I was 6 years old.

Coming from a family of history buffs, I felt the urge to share this tradition with Oliver, my son. Unfortunately for him, I didn't inherit the baking gene Ruth had. I wasn't going to let that stop me from giving it the old college try, though. After all, what I cherished most about those days eating peach ice cream with my great-grandmother was just being with her. Truth be told, even if she had made the most unappetizing dessert, I would have thought it was the most magical thing I had ever tasted—just because she always let me lend a helping hand.

In July 1940, Ruth and my great-grandfather, Burton Caffey, moved into their freshly built rock house in Sidney. I can imagine what a relief it was to have their own home, since they had lived in a renovated 20-by-40-foot chicken house on a neighboring property while the new house was being built.

Soon after moving in, the couple planted a number of peach trees, which produced a great deal of fruit by 1950. When I asked Stewart Caffey, the son of Ruth and Burton, why they chose to plant peach trees, he said, "Mom picked peach trees to plant because the house where [her parents, Bob and Vera Stewart,] lived had peach trees, so she really wanted her family to have peach trees at the new farm, too." For the next 20-plus years, peaches were a staple of the Caffey household.

Stewart recalled a number of "peach parties" to clean and preserve the freshly picked fruit. These parties quickly turned into a family affair. Stewart's grandparents, aunts, uncles and everyone in between would come to help him and his parents stock the freezer. The family all pitched in to peel peaches, remove their seeds and cut the fruit into chunks to prepare for freezing. Ruth stored hundreds of small plastic bags of cut-up peaches in the freezer to ensure they had frozen fruit on hand year-round.

When the kids couldn't wait for peach desserts to be made, Stewart said, they would mash up the freshly chunked peaches, sprinkle some sugar on top and indulge in the peach purée. And if they were lucky, they might get to indulge while the ice cream was being made.

Stewart and his son, Michael, both recall sitting on the ice cream freezer to aid in the cranking process. When the bucket started shaking, the kids knew it was their time to shine. They would grab a towel, fold it up to make a good cushion and sit right on top until whichever lucky adult was finished cranking.

To this day, Michael Caffey swears that was the best ice cream he's ever had. He has long since taken over the role of making Ruth's peach ice cream, but nothing compares to the hand-cranked ice cream of the past. That tradition continued until around 1980, when the original peach trees began to die off. Ruth and Burton then planted 10 more trees and began the process all over again—this time with the help of their grown kids and the grandkids that had been added to the clan.

I wanted to return to my favorite tradition with my own little boy. My husband is from De Leon, and the De Leon Peach and Melon Festival runs deep in his blood—something that he has passed down to Oliver. We should have known we were going to raise a peach-loving boy with histories like ours. Making homemade peach ice cream is the perfect way to begin blending our family traditions. Peach season in Texas runs from mid-May through August, giving us plenty of time to indulge in all the sweet treats we can think of, as long as we can find the peaches to make them.

I had two concerns when deciding to go on the hunt for fresh peaches. One was where I was going to find them in Stewart and Michael Caffey recall many occasions spent sitting on an old-fashioned, hand-cranked ice cream freezer like this one.

Comanche County, and the other related to the heartache and damage wreaked by the winter storm. I was afraid it might have ruined the chance of a good crop.

I called upon our AgriLife county extension agent, Michael Berry, for insight. In the 1950s, Hiram Smith ran a family fruit farm in De Leon that was the largest in the state. Since then, Comanche County has become known for its late frost, significantly curtailing the county's peach crops. According to U.S. Department of Agriculture acreage numbers from the past 24 years, peach orchard production in Texas has declined 72%, Berry said. Texas was down to only 2,700 peach orchard acres in 2017.

Fortunately for Comanche County, the Sorrells family has braved the weather time and time again to provide peaches for all to enjoy. Kinley Sorrells graciously took me out to his orchard to let me see firsthand what peach farmers are dealing with.

Sorrells points out one of the many peaches hit by hail during storms in May and June. As the peach grows, the damage from the hail grows with it.

"I don't think the freeze hurt us. It's the hail, the weather after that freeze, that's hurt us," Sorrells said, as he pulled a pinged peach from a branch. He showed me multiple peaches with hail damage, along with a couple of peach trees that look like they were in the path of a small tornado. 2021 has delivered storm after storm for these farmers.

As we made our way through the orchard, Sorrells spoke about his family business and the process of harvesting the peaches and getting them to stores. Clearly there was so much more to farming than I ever knew, as so much of what he shared was new and fascinating to me. I caught myself making mental notes of all the things I wanted to share with Oliver. In the world of a 3-year-old, peaches come from the store, not miles from our house in the middle of a field. As Sorrells said, "Unless somebody has told them, how are they going to know?"

When it came time to make the famous peach ice cream, I enlisted a fellow Comanche resident, Brooke Lampman, who also married into the De Leon farming community, and her 2-year-old son, McLane, to help me out. She and I are each raising boys who have a thirst for getting dirty, farming and, most of all, sugar. While the boys entertained themselves with tractors and dinosaurs, Lampman and I had our own peach party. Once we had the peaches prepared, the madness commenced.

With our helpers' young ages, I'm sure you can imagine what it was like having those two involved. More ingredients

Oliver enjoys helping me make peach ice cream. He stirred in whipping cream, threw some peaches in the freezer and was the official taste tester.

“Unless somebody has told them, how are they going to know?”

might have ended up on the floor than in the ice cream container, but we accomplished exactly what I’d hoped: We had a lot of laughs, shared a lot of knowledge and, most importantly, made a wonderful memory.

As we explained why the pictures we were looking at “looked funny”—weren’t in color—I realized what a lost art the entire process is. These kids will never know sitting around in a circle, peeling peaches with their family, folding a towel to keep their bottom from freezing or the hand cramps that come with churning, well, anything. Sorrells’ words came back to me: “Unless somebody has told them, how are they going to know?”

With so much of history ultimately forgotten, I hope that doing our part to keep family traditions alive, in our small corner of the world, is enough to salvage part of it. I hope we can instill in the next generation the belief that hard work leads to rewards—like peeling those peaches for the ice cream—that the struggles faced before us lead to the lives we have now, and that hard times always pass.

Creating and maintaining traditions keeps us rooted in our family and community. Take the time to have a peach party with friends and family and go to the Peach and Melon Festival to enable younger generations to experience a piece of your childhood—anything to keep your own history alive. One day, those experiences might become a cherished memory as well. Wrapping up a towel to sit on the machine to make ice cream might be a thing of the past, but gathering as a family to create something all will enjoy is timeless. ■

Ruth Caffey's peach ice cream recipe that has been passed down generation after generation.

Fresh Peach Loaf

CAKE

- 2 cups flour
- 1½ cups sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1½ teaspoons baking soda
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups peaches, mashed
- ⅓ cup peach juice, reserved from mashed peaches

TOPPING

- ¼ cup light brown sugar
- ¼ cup chopped pecans

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter and flour a tube pan or a 9-by-13-inch baking pan.
2. CAKE Combine all cake ingredients in a large mixing bowl and beat thoroughly to combine. Pour the batter into the prepared pan.
3. TOPPING In a small bowl, combine the brown sugar and chopped pecans. Sprinkle the topping onto the cake.
4. Bake about 40 minutes, until the cake is springy to the touch and a toothpick inserted in the middle comes out clean.

A School Was Here

Memory lane leads to an abandoned Piney Woods schoolyard created by the Rosenwald Fund

BY CYNTHIA MATLOCK • ILLUSTRATION BY DAVID VOGIN

WHEN I WAS A CHILD in 1968, my father and I visited the abandoned schoolyard of our Cherokee County community of Green Chapel. Near the collapsing schoolhouse, we found a timeworn and rusty iron swingset laying on its side. Even now, I can imagine children running across the playground, safely insulated from the cares of the world.

That schoolhouse, tucked into the East Texas Piney Woods off Cary Lake Road, had been the beneficiary of funds from the Julius Rosenwald Fund, a foundation that helped schools in African American communities.

The school sat about 9 miles west of Jacksonville in a community of impoverished African American farming families who lived more or less self-sufficiently.

Cherokee County records indicate the Green Chapel community's church, Brisby Chapel, was founded December 11, 1881. As was true in many rural African American communities, the church building was where the community met for worship on Sunday and held school Monday through Friday. Eventually they built a one-room schoolhouse.

Times were hard, and these farming families—usually with several children—did not have money to repair the school's leaking roof, holes in the floor and broken windowpanes. It was a challenge just to purchase books for the students. In the early 1920s, the community decided one possible solution was to seek funding for a school. They targeted the Julius Rosenwald Fund, established in 1917 by the philanthropist and businessman of the same name who was one of the owners of Sears, Roebuck and Co.

Rosenwald partnered with African American educator and activist Booker T. Washington to create the fund for the chief purpose of improving education for Black people. Between 1910 and 1930, the fund contributed to more than 5,000 buildings for Black students across 15 Southern states. Local school boards had to approve the new schools first, then the communities had to raise matching funds and assist with the construction labor.

The schools created memories for those who attended. Clara Brown, 96, a former Green Chapel student, says, "We'd pack our lunch of biscuit and ribbon cane syrup. Or cornbread dressing in a jar. Put it in a syrup bucket or shoebox and head off to school. Then we'd cut through the woods, around our neighbor's fields, being real careful not to step on his crop."

When I complained about my own school, my father often reminded me "to jus' be thankful" because he had to walk 2 miles to Green Chapel school, even when it snowed.

We confirmed that distance when we found a cluster of sagging houses, one of which belonged to his family, about 2 miles northwest of the school.

The then-crumbling schoolhouse that Clara Brown attended at Green Chapel was a white, two-room building. The lower grades were on the left and the upper grades on the right, and each room had a wood-burning stove for heat. When the children completed the eight grades taught in the country school, they faced the dilemma of deciding which Black high school they would attend.

"My ninth grade year, I went to Jacksonville ISD. Then the next year, I went to Neches ISD," says Ollie Chandler, a former Green Chapel student.

"The teachers either stayed with a family in the community, or they rented themselves a house in the area. Keep teachers from driving back and forth," Brown said. "Lots of days, we missed school because we had to gather the crops, then you'd get behind in ya classwork."

After farming families moved away from the community in the 1950s, the Green Chapel school was consolidated with Jacksonville ISD.

When my husband and I visited the schoolyard with our son in 2020, untrammelled foliage and small trees covered everything. The chia-chia calls of birds interrupted the quiet of the woods. My heart shrank because I couldn't see that anything remained of the building. But as I turned to leave, I stumbled upon a piece of concrete. Kicking the leaves off, I discovered it was the school's old well cover. And there was still one leg of the swingset. I quickly yanked out my phone and snapped pictures.

After leaving the peaceful countryside that day, I recalled how my older relatives often reminisced about the "village feeling" they had in those Rosenwald community schools.

I left smiling, thinking of how those brave school-age children and their families persevered in receiving an education at Green Chapel—even way out there. ■

BLADE STUNNER

Beautifully made, magnificent to look at, this knife is a work of art at only $99

It's not often you happen upon a blade smith who has gem cutting skills. In fact, you stand a better chance finding a needle in a haystack. But finding needles in haystacks is what we do best, so when we saw this master craftsman's handiwork, we made certain to procure some of these Southwestern masterpieces to complete our collection.

The stainless steel blade, bolster and pommel are exquisitely etched and would have looked great with a less ambitious handle. But the results of overachieving are stunning here. The turquoise-blue colored handle is ablaze with assorted stones like jasper, marble, sunstone, and coral that have been hand cut and inlaid in a Southwestern motif that conjures images of intricately beaded belts and moccasins.

Whether you collect blades, interesting stones, or are a lover of the great American Southwest, the Sedona Knife is more than cut out to do the job.

But we don't stop there. While supplies last, we'll include a pair of $99, 8x21 power compact binoculars and a genuine leather sheath FREE when you purchase the Sedona Knife.

Stolen Words

While in Texas, author Nelson Algren was a man with a thieving arm

BY CHRISTOPHER ADAMS

THE AWARD-WINNING author who would go on to write the classic novel The Man With the Golden Arm entered a building at Sul Ross State Teachers College in Alpine in early 1934 and made off with one of the institution's typewriters. The next morning, the thief hopped a train out of town.

Nelson Algren won the National Book Award in 1950 for the aforementioned novel and earned three O. Henry Awards for his short stories, but the "poet of the Chicago slums" found trouble in Texas before achieving national literary acclaim.

Algren couldn't find work in his hometown of Chicago or anywhere else in the greater Midwest during the Great Depression and eventually traveled to Texas to pack black-eyed peas and run a Sinclair gas station between Rio Hondo and Harlingen. But neither venture provided Algren satisfactory income, and he sought other opportunities in the Rio Grande Valley.

"He crossed the border to Matamoros and came back again, ate in missions, slept in hobo jungles, lost in crap games, rode in cattle or refrigerated boxcars," wrote author Bettina Drew in the introduction to the book The Texas Stories of Nelson Algren.

An exhausted Algren returned to Chicago at the end of 1932 and, having written a well-received short story, decided that creative writing was his path to fulfillment. He persuaded a New York publisher to give him an advance for a novel that was to be about the illusion of the American dream and based on his experiences in Texas.

"He saw a lot of poverty and contradictions, such as poor whites who were oppressed by the rich but took out their anger on Mexicans and Blacks who were even poorer and more oppressed," Mary Wisniewski, author of a 2016 Algren biography called Algren: A Life, explained in an email.

Algren returned to Texas in September 1933 and made his way to Alpine to create his crucial work. He convinced the president of Sul Ross State Teachers College (now Sul Ross State University) that he was "a big-time New York writer," granting him access to the college's typewriters to draft his novel. However, his advance hadn't amounted to much, and by January 1934, he was broke, with an unfinished manuscript. He had no choice but to return home, where accessing a typewriter would be a real challenge. So he stole one from Sul Ross.

"I think he just figured he needed the typewriter more than the college did, so he had a right to it," Wisniewski said.

Algren fled Alpine on a freight train but was subsequently caught and locked up in the Brewster County jail. It proved to be a temporary setback. He returned to Chicago after his release and completed his first novel, Somebody in Boots, about his experiences living in Texas.

And the typewriter? Algren left it at an Alpine freight depot where it was to be shipped to Chicago.

"The typewriter was not sent to Chicago," Wisniewski said. Its whereabouts seem to be unknown. "Algren had used it to write Somebody in Boots while he was working at Alpine—but didn't finish it on that typewriter. He had to finish it back in Chicago on another machine." ■

Kids Cooking

Youngsters in the kitchen help make family meals truly rewarding

BY MEGAN MYERS, FOOD EDITOR

I've encouraged my children to join me in the kitchen ever since they were little. Cooking with kids requires extra patience but reaps rewards down the line. Small children can practice mixing and measuring ingredients and kneading dough, and older kids can learn how to chop and take charge of the stove. Encouraging their efforts makes all the difference in kids' kitchen success. My son adores meatballs, and this baked version keeps it simple. Serve with your favorite pasta or just scoop onto slices of garlic bread.

Cheesy Baked Meatballs

1 pound ground beef
½ pound pork sausage
1 egg
¼ cup breadcrumbs
1 tablespoon tomato paste
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon onion powder
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 jar (24 ounces) marinara sauce
8 ounces fresh mozzarella slices

1. Preheat oven to 400 degrees. In a large bowl, crumble together beef and sausage. Mix in egg, breadcrumbs, tomato paste, parsley, Worcestershire sauce, onion powder, garlic powder, salt and pepper.
2. Scoop out about 2 tablespoons of the mixture and roll it into a ball with your hands. Place in a 9-by-13-inch baking dish and repeat until all of the mixture has been used.
3. Bake 18–20 minutes, until cooked through. Remove dish from oven and pour marinara sauce into the pan over the meatballs. Arrange mozzarella slices between meatballs, breaking into smaller pieces if needed.
4. Return to oven and bake an additional 10 minutes, until cheese is melted and sauce is bubbly.

Guacamole

IVAN REMLEY
BLUEBONNET EC

Adults can take care of the chopping while little hands do the mashing and mixing of this fresh guacamole. Don't limit yourself to eating it with just chips or tacos—Ivan, 14, recommends serving with fresh veggies such as sliced radishes, carrots and cucumbers or even kale chips.

½ onion, diced

2 Roma tomatoes, seeded and diced

½ jalapeño pepper, seeded and minced

1 clove garlic, minced

Juice of 1–2 limes, divided use

½ teaspoon salt, plus more to taste

3 avocados, divided use

1. In a large bowl, stir together the onion, tomatoes, jalapeño, garlic, 1 tablespoon lime juice and salt.

2. Slice two avocados in half lengthwise, making one long cut around the pit. Separate the halves and remove the pits. With a spoon, scoop out the flesh and add to the mixture in the bowl.

3. Mash and stir everything together, until the ingredients are well combined.

4. Slice the third avocado lengthwise, separate the halves and remove the pit. With a small knife, cut the flesh into small cubes. Scoop out the cubes and add them to the bowl with the avocado mixture. Add 1 tablespoon of lime juice and fold the avocado cubes in just enough for a slightly chunky texture.

5. Taste and adjust seasoning with lime juice and salt as needed.

Cooper's Bacon Cheddar Chicken Pasta

BRYAN TEXAS UTILITIES

This family-friendly pasta recipe is a great way to teach older kids a variety of skills, such as sautéing and creating a simple cheese sauce. Cooper, 12, recommends adding chopped green onions to serve along with the extra bacon.

SERVES 6–8

1 pound pasta, any type

6 strips bacon, diced; divided use

1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breasts; cut into 1-inch chunks

Salt and pepper, to taste

1 tablespoon butter

2 tablespoons flour

1 packet ranch dip mix

2 cups milk

1½ cups shredded cheddar cheese

1. Cook pasta according to package directions, drain and keep warm.

2. While pasta is cooking, cook bacon in a large, deep-sided skillet over medium heat until crisp, then remove and drain on a paper towel. Drain all but one tablespoon of bacon drippings from pan.

3. Season the chicken with salt and pepper. Add butter to the skillet with the bacon drippings, stirring to melt, then add chicken. Cook until tender and no longer pink, 8–10 minutes.

4. Mix together flour and ranch dip mix, then sprinkle evenly over the chicken and stir to coat. Stir in the milk and cook, stirring occasionally, until thickened and bubbly.

5. Stir in cheddar and half of the reserved bacon, stirring to melt the cheese completely. Add the pasta and stir to mix well. Serve with remaining bacon sprinkled on top.

Texas-Style Chorizo Frittata

MATTHEW PEÑA
PEDERNALES EC

Breakfast for dinner is always a great way to get kids involved in the kitchen. Matthew, 16, came up with this recipe to help out his parents on a busy day using ingredients they already had in the fridge.

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- ½ onion, chopped

- 1½ cups chopped bell pepper
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 pound Mexican chorizo
- 9 eggs
- 1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
- ¼ cup chopped parsley
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 8 ounces Oaxaca cheese, sliced

OPTIONAL GARNISHES

- Chopped parsley
- Sour cream or Mexican crema
- Sliced avocado
- Pico de gallo

COOK'S TIP For a spicier frittata, add sliced jalapeños or hot sauce to the egg mixture before baking.

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.
2. Heat a 10-inch ovenproof skillet over medium heat and add olive oil. Stir in onion and bell pepper and sauté until tender. Add garlic and cook an additional 3 minutes, stirring often to prevent garlic from burning. Remove vegetables to a bowl and set aside.

3. Crumble the chorizo into the skillet and sauté until fully cooked, breaking up any large chunks. Remove from heat and drain excess oil if needed.

4. In a large bowl, whisk together eggs, cheddar, parsley, salt and pepper. Add egg mixture and sautéed vegetables to the cooked chorizo in the skillet. Stir to combine and distribute ingredients evenly. Add Oaxaca cheese evenly on top of frittata.

5. Place skillet in oven and bake 20 minutes, making sure the frittata has fully set. Garnish with parsley, sour cream or Mexican crema, sliced avocado, and pico de gallo.

COURTESY CHET GARNER

Head Honcho

The barbacoa at Vera's in Brownsville rises to the occasion

BY CHET GARNER

TO MANY TEXANS, Cabeza de Vaca was a Spanish explorer who shipwrecked near Galveston Island centuries ago. For folks in Brownsville, cabeza de vaca (head of the cow) has a much tastier meaning. And you won't find a more authentic version of real-deal cow head barbacoa than at Vera's Backyard Bar-B-Que.

Before lunch, I asked owner Armando Vera for a look at his pit because you can learn a lot about pit bosses by seeing the tools they use. Vera's pit was unlike anything I've seen. It's literally a pit in the ground, about 4 feet deep and full of blazing logs. It looked like a gateway to Hades.

Vera explained that an open pit is the traditional way to cook Mexican-style barbacoa. An entire cow head is wrapped in foil, placed in a hole and covered with burning logs for 10–12 hours. Vera's is the only place in Texas that still cooks barbacoa underground, the traditional way that Vera's father used when he started the business in 1955.

Even though I found the sight of the head to be less than appetizing, I decided to judge the barbacoa with my mouth instead of my eyes. The menu included almost every part of the head: lengua (tongue), ojos (eyes), jeta (jaw) and cachete (cheek). I ordered a bit of everything, along with homemade tortillas and salsa.

With each bite, the image of the full head faded, replaced by savory flavors of perfectly smoked meat, tangy salsa and pillow tortillas. The barbacoa offers flavor, smoke and texture that you can't get cooking it in an oven or over a stove. The experience at Vera's prompted me to do something I never expected to do in my lifetime: I ordered a second helping of lengua. ■

ABOVE Chet isn't sure he sees eye to eye with the cow head in front of him.

TCP WEB EXTRA Chet finds that barbacoa, much like his musings, is tongue in cheek in his latest video. See all his Texplorations on The Daytripper on PBS.

Portraits

Deep lines and wrinkles tell a person's story, but a twinkle of the eye or sly smile makes us wonder what more there is to tell. Whether carefully posed or caught spontaneously, these Texans have great heads on their shoulders.

Pools in the Pasture

Summers on a ranch promise swimming in stock tanks

BY BRENDA KISSKO

WHEN YOU GROW UP on a ranch in West Texas, you learn early about the finer things in life. You eat oysters (of the mountain variety), you hire a full-time lawn service to maintain every acre of your spread (some call it grazing cattle), and you even get your own pair of jeans with free designer rips. And of course, dahling, we always had a pool.

Granted, the cows thought those live-stock tanks were for them, but I believed my dad put those tanks all over the ranch just so us girls could take our pick of swimming locations for the day. The water was always ice cold and as pure as it comes, straight from the ground. If we were thirsty, we'd just stick our tongue under the fill pipe for a gulp of goodness straight from God to our mouths. I swear it was better than Fiji Water or Topo Chico.

That's how we spent our summers, my mom, sister and I—with the pickup backed up to a stock tank, pulp fiction in hand, George Strait serenading us from the stereo speakers. No sunscreen allowed because cows don't really like drinking oxybenzone. Any time we had a slumber party, swimming was on the agenda, followed by rolling in a huge pile of cottonseed.

If the tank hadn't been cleaned out in a while, we'd just grab chunks of the moss (picture the Grinch's snot) and throw it to the ground below. Totally cool. But not if you tried to do a handstand and came up with it all over your face. Gross.

My favorite tank—I mean pool—was at my grandparents' ranch. My aunt freed her pet goldfish in it before going off to college at Texas Tech, and—no kidding—those suckers grew to be a foot long and multiplied like rabbits. All us grandkids loved learning to swim there, racing from side to side and seeing who could catch the most fish with our hands. I'm sure their great-great-great-grand-fishes are still swimming around in the tank today.

I think Kevin Bacon did his part to bring tank swimming back in style. In I Love Dick, an Amazon series set in Marfa (another one of my favorite places), he ends the pilot episode with a skinny-dip in a tank with a gorgeous view of the mountains. That's some good living right there.

As I'm writing this, I'm trying to remember the last time I swam in a live-stock tank. Sure, I've done rooftop pools, lazy rivers and hot tubs right off the ski slope, but it's been far too long since that good old-fashioned, back-to-my-roots dunk in a redneck infinity pool. Good thing summer's not quite over. ■
